GAWTHROP REFUSES PROBERS' JOB

What Coolidge Read at 12. Dragon's Courtship. Straight Electron Path. National Theater? Not Yet.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CALVIN COOLIDGE reveals a list of fourteen books, including Hilliard's Sixth Reader, that influenced his boyhood. The names of the fourteen books, published in Cosmopolitan Magazine, make you understand that in boyhood, as in the White House, Calvin Coolidge was a serious person.

No "Jack in the Mountains," no story by Capt. Marryat, not even "Westward Ho." "Huckleberry Finn," "Gulliver's Travels," "Robinson Crusoe" or "Swiss Family Robinson" appears in the Coolidge boyhood library.

THE LIST, which you will read with Mr. Coolidge's article in the October Cosmopolitan, just published, includes a life of Garfield, another of Capt. John Brown, "Washington and His Generals," "The Life and Public Services of Abraham Lincoln," "Choice Poems and Lyrics."

Mr. Coolidge's grandmother used to read out loud to him. Perhaps she helped select his library.

HE SAYS:

"I was no prodigy."

But he is mistaken about that. He had read those fourteen books at twelve years of age.

THE OLDEST title of nobility in Europe, according to Voltaire, belonged to descendants of thieves that escaped justice by fleeing to the swamps on which Venice now stands.

That or any human name or title would be modern, compared to the family trees of twenty-eight of our animal brothers, now studied by scientists of New York's Natural History Museum.

These, iguanas, giant lizards, go back two hundred million years in a straight line. Compare "Mayflower aristocracy" with that.

THE IGUANAS are kept under ultra-violet ray lamps, in quarters at high temperature, imitating their desert conditions.

Scientists, wishing to raise young iguanas for study, seek to promote courtship among the lizards and for that you must keep them warm.

Dr. Noble, in charge of experiments, says the big lizard's only sign of affection is a shaking or nodding of the head, and he does not yet know whether the females exercise any discrimination, or whether all iguanas look alike to each other.

THESE HUGE creatures, that live fifty years, grow as long as fifty feet, and are useful as destroyers of vermin, may have supplied the foundation for legends about dragons, Perseus and Andromeda, and the respectable British Saint George.

Ancestors of these iguanas were real winged dragons that could have knocked down brick walls and swallowed Saint George, horse, spear and all.

HERE IS something for young inventors.

Metals and other substances offer resistance, greater or less, to the passage of electricity. It is found that lead, normally a very poor conductor, offers practically no resistance to the current when reduced to a temperature of some four hundred and fifty degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

Scientists, experimenting with lead in liquid helium, supplying the necessary low temperature, found that the electric current continued to flow for a week and more, and declared results suggest "perpetual motion."

WHY THIS happens is for young inventors to discover. Scientists "guess" that the very low temperature changes the arrangement of electrons within the atoms through or around which the current passes.

They do not know what electricity is, or just what it does, traveling 186,000 miles a second through various elements.

ONE GUESS is that when the atom is down almost to absolute zero, the electrons, traveling around the proton or nucleus, several trillion times a second, change their course from a very irregular line to a straight line, which aids electricity on its journey.

The young gentleman who can reproduce, without excessively low temperatures that could not be maintained, the necessary conditions within the atom, could make many hundred millions of dollars, if no one stole his idea and he got what it would be worth.

HE COULD transport electric power, at low cost, without loss of energy, great distances, and perhaps deliver to New York the power of a great cataract in Brazil not used now and said to be the most powerful in the world.

Much of modern invention, unfortunately for the untrained man, calls for thorough education in chemistry, physics and high mathematics, ability to deal with the molecule and atom, invisible to all but the eye of mathematics.

THE GOVERNMENT is asked to supply money to endow or subsidize a national theater. And it is suggested that the Federal Reserve Board advance money to responsible theatrical producers for their new plays.

The suggestion is interesting in a nation supposed to have such a horror of "paternalism," especially with ten millions and more idle.

It is also interesting to note that a nation with a horrow of anything like the dole can dole out eighty millions of public money to a bank in trouble, without hesitation. The idea is, probably, that you cannot pauperize a bank, whereas you

PLOT FAILS TO IMPEDE WEDDING

Society Girl's Father Causes Arrest of Extortionists

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Rudolph Diez, 31, a former grocer, was arrested early today when, police charged, he appeared at a deserted house and took a package, supposed to contain money, left as the result of an extortion note received by Edwin M. Ashcraft, Jr., an attorney.

Ashcraft's daughter, Ann, was to be married this afternoon to Otis Mitchell, of Minneapolis. Several days ago Ashcraft received a letter which, he said, congratulated him on the approaching marriage of his daughter, but demanded $3,000 on penalty of her being kidnaped and killed. The note, he said, instructed that the money be left at the vacant house on North Ashland avenue.

ACCUSED MAN SEIZED

The attorney got in touch with the police of suburban Evanston, where he resides. They, in turn, informed Chicago police, and a detail from both forces was assigned to capture the extortionist.

At the appointed time Ashcraft's chauffeur, accompanied by an Evanston policeman who impersonated the attorney, arrived at the house. The policeman put the dummy package in the house and he and the chauffeur left.

Soon thereafter, police say, Diez appeared, went into the house and got the package. He was arrested by police hidden nearby. His wife Bertha, 27, was later taken into custody.

The wedding, it was said, was to be held as planned today.

EX-STUDENT GETS TERM

As an aftermath of another alleged extortion attempt, a former university student was under a one to 20-year reformatory sentence today.

He is William P. Brand, 21-year-old former employe of Charles F. Gray, real estate broker, who paid for the boy's two years in the university and then gave him a position in his brokerage office

Brand had pleaded he was innocent, but the evidence showed Gray received a printed letter last May demanding $5,000 and warning him that failure to pay would bring "the bombing of your home, and your children, Carol Josephine, 6, and Charles, Jr., 4, will be poisoned."

TWO ARRESTED

Gray ignored the letter, but when two more warnings came he went to the police. Under police orders a dummy package was placed at the spot designated by the writer of the letters, and when Charles T. Kimball, 29, called for it he was arrested.

He named Brand, who later was caught. Kimball maintained he did not know the nature of the package. He was a co-defendant at the hearing, but the disposition of the case against him was postponed, pending further investigation.

Highland Park Pool Closes Tomorrow

Highland Park swimming pool will close its season tomorrow. Public Works Director Edward G. Lang issued closing orders today for 6 p. m. Lack of attendance was given as the reason. Other city pools closed before Labor Day.

Ice Water Fountain On Fire Downtown

Downtown fire apparatus was called to the wholesale millinery store of Smith & Hartnett, at 808 Penn avenue, last night, when fire was discovered in an ice water fountain. The damage was slight.

NEW SUICIDE MYSTERY IN BERN CASE

Body of 'Secret Wife' Hunted; Jean Buries Husband, Collapses

By WALLACE X. RAWLES
International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 10.—Fresh mystery today had been added to the strange suicide of Paul Bern, film producer and husband of Jean Harlow, exotic platinum blonde screen actress.

While Hollywod paid farewell to the beloved motion picture producer who ended his life Sunday night, holiday crowds and officers were searching the waters of the Sacramento River for the "phantom" woman of Bern's past.

Dorothy Millette, who for 20 years was known as Paul Bern's wife, although she had never been married to him, heard the news of his suicide, slipped away from the San Francisco hotel that had been her quiet haven since May, boarded a river steamer and apparently jumped overboard.

DEMAND EXPLANATION

Although all official investigation of the case was ended, relatives of the dead producer demanded that the motive for his death be made known.

Mrs. William Marcus, his sister, cried:

"Why did he do it?

"What drove him to it?

"What does it mean—'Last night was only a comedy'?

"Why don't the ones who know tell us about it?

"Are we not entitled to know?

"Give us justice for my dear brother's sake! He was the cleanest and finest ever living."

Mrs. Marcus said:

"My brother was so in love with Jean Harlow that if he could have snatched the stars from heaven for her, he would have done it to make her smile."

Published reports that Bern's suicide was preceded by a quarrel with his beautiful bride of two months, in which he threatened her with a gun and told her to get out of the house, were denied by her stepfather, Marino Bello. He said:

"I know nothing about that."

The tale of the quarrel also was denied by John Carmichael, the

Daylight Bandits Rob Man Downtown

Daylight and a busy corner mean nothing to four young men who slugged and robbed Joseph Nicholas, 38, of 804 Wall street, Pitcairn, of $2.50 at Penn avenue and Eleventh street at 11 a. m. today. Two of the footpads hit Nicholas, he told police, held him on the ground while the other two "frisked" him.

N. Y. THEATERS BOMBED

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Terrific bomb explosions wrecked the entrances of two movie houses early today, tossed sleeping people from their beds and spread terror through two widely-separated neighborhoods.

Hundreds of panes of glass crashed to sidewalks as a blast in front of Loew's Forty-sixth street theater in Brooklyn was followed quickly by another explosion in the entrance to Loew's Canal street theater on Manhattan's lower East Side.

Detectives said there has been conflict between two unions of motion picture operators, but no evidence was made public connecting this dispute with the bomb plot. Three men in a sedan were seen speeding away from the Brooklyn theater about the time of the blast.

ROBINS' TRAIL HOT IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—Belief that Col. Raymond Robins is somewhere in Chicago approached virtual certainty today when a personal friend of the missing man, W. W. Haupt, reported he saw and spoke to the noted prohibitionist two days ago.

This was the second report to the effect that the vanished friend of President Hoover had been seen in this city and spurred government detectives and other officials to further widen and intensify their hunt for the political and dry leader.

Haupt, an automobile dealer, who for years was associated with Col. Robins in the progressive political movement, said he was positive he had met and conversed with the prohibitionist a few hours before it became known the federal government was searching for him. Haupt said:

"I couldn't be mistaken, I was walking north and he was going south on State street, in front of the Palmer House, I recognized him in the crowd and said: 'Hello, Mr. Robins.' He answered me and walked on.

"He was wearing a black slouch hat and gray suit. He was alone and carried no brief case nor luggage. I thought nothing of his failure to stop and chat, as I had seen him as recently as the time of the Republican national convention when he addressed the resolutions committee in favor of a dry plank."

Haupt said he encountered Col. Robins about 3 p. m. Thursday. This was approximately a half hour after Mrs. W. Requa Bryant, another friend of the missing man, said she saw him on the same street. Mrs. Bryant said Col. Robins appeared dazed, giving rise to the theory he may be wandering about Chicago streets, suffering from amnesia.

Vickerman, Ill, Shows No Change

No change was noted today in the condition of John W. Vickerman, director of the County Department of Elections, ill at his home in Bellevue of pneumonia and a blood stream infection.

Constables Face Bond Hunt in Vice Quiz

A constable and four deputy constables of the Nineteenth Ward today faced the possibility of hunting new bondsmen as a result of Judge F. P. Patterson's investigation into so-called protected vice resorts in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County.

This development followed closely amended reports from constables of the Fourth and Twenty-second city wards, and the First, Second and Third wards of Braddock that they had been unable to find evidence of vice in their bailiwicks and Judge Patterson's threat to make a private investigation

Judge Patterson set September 19 for hearings on the petitions of Joseph McArdle, for withdrawal as bondsman for Constable J. A Healy of the Nineteenth Ward and the Commercial Casualty Insurance Company for Deputy Constables Blair Schulter, A. H. Grimm, Clarence A. Neuner and Charles Tigh. The withdrawal, the petitioner charged, was prompted by the knowledge that "there are open and flagrant violations of the law in the ward, and further that said J. A. Healy has been informed of the notorious violations but has steadfastly refused to remedy the condition."

Judge Patterson, in his threat to make a private investigation into alleged vice conditions, said:

"We will make our own investigation. If we find these places open you are liable for indictment, fine and imprisonment. If we find your report true, we will commend you. If it is false, we will bring you in and submit your respective cases to the grand jury."

DEDICATE HUGE BRIDGE TODAY

The new George Westinghouse Bridge, spanning Turtle Creek valley, was to be thrown open to the public following formal dedication of the $1,750,000 structure at 2:30 p. m. today.

H. H. Westinghouse, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company and brother of the man for whom the bridge was named, will cut the ribbons permitting the first procession of automobiles to cross the concrete memorial to the famous inventor.

The new bridge is the final link in the improved and relocated Lincoln highway. It is 1,510 feet long.

Former Gov. John S. Fisher, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, and J. Lysle Stuart, former secretary of the Pennsylvania Highway Department, are to be speakers. A. L. Humphrey will preside, and the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, bishop of the Pittsburgh Episcopal diocese, will offer the invocation.

County Policeman Hurt in Auto Crash

Corp. A. Flannigan, of Gibsonia, member of the Allegheny County Police, is in a serious condition today in Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington, suffering from a fractured pelvis. He was injured when thrown from a motorcycle in a crash with an automobile on the Russellton road.

4 PROBES OPEN IN BOAT BLAST

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—A shocked city and nation, appalled by the horror of the blowing up of the 44-year-old steamer Observation in the East River with a toll of dead that today mounted to 38, united in four investigations of the tragedy.

Sixty-eight persons were officially reported injured and nine men were still missing this morning as the investigators sought to establish responsibility and perhaps charge criminal negligence.

While weeping women strained against police cordons near the barred scene of the disaster in attempts to learn the fate of those on board—only 34 of the dead were identified as yet—grappling hooks fished for bodies and a floating derrick was manipulated to raise the hulk of the ill-fated vessel.

With the raising of the boilers,

Unfilled U. S. Steel Tonnage Increases

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation during August showed an increase of 3,293 tons over the 1,969,595 tons August 31, 1932. This compares with 1,966,302 tons on July 31. On June 30 unfilled tonnage was 2,034,768 on May 31 it totaled 2,177,162 and on August 31, 1931, it amounted to 3,169,457 tons.

This was the first increase after 16 successive months of declines.

JUDGE WON'T INVESTIGATE UTILITIES

Will Stay on Bench, He Tells Head Of Committee

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Judge Robert S. Gawthrop telephoned Senator William S. Rial, chairman of the State Senate's Public Service Commission investigating committee, today and declined to serve as the committee's counsel.

Senator Rial said the judge told him he thinks he should complete his term on the bench and for that reason deems it undesirable for him to accept the post of counsel. His term expires January 1.

The judge, who was in Europe when his appointment as counsel was made, has been studying the matter since his return earlier in the week.

He reached his decision today and immediately telephoned Senator Rial from his home in West Chester.

The Senator said Judge Gawthrop told him he is writing him a letter, setting forth in detail his reasons for declining the position.

Senator Rial said no alternative candidate for the job had been selected.

P. S. C. Sues to Block Clarion Power Bond Sale

HARRISBURG, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The Public Service Commission today filed in Dauphin County County Court a petition for a temporary injunction to restrain the Pennsylvania Electric Company from selling any bonds in connection with its Clarion River power project.

Cochet Wins Way to Net Final

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(INS.)—Henri Cochet, of France, the master duellist of the tennis courts, ran out his overnight match with Wilmer Allison, Texas, in the semi-final round of the national singles championship this morning, thus qualifying for the "million dollar match" with Ellsworth Vines, American champion, in the final round this afternoon.

Cochet came through as a result of winning the single set scheduled for this morning, the complete score being, 6-1, 10-12, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, Allison making a game fight to the end, but being out-fenced and out-steadied.

Legless American Quits Channel Swim

DEAL, England, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—After bobbing about in the channel all night in choppy seas, Charles Zimmy, legless professional swimmer of Long Beach, Cal., abandoned an attempt to swim to France. He was taken out of the water at 12:45 a. m.

DRYS SHUN PRESIDENT RACE FOR DRIVE ON CONGRESS

PARTY PLANKS SCORNED BY STRATEGISTS

Major Platforms Held Void in Relation To Legislators

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The support of congressional candidates friendly to prohibition was today's advice to voters from two outstanding prohibition organizations—the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League and the National Prohibition Board of Trategy.

The league's committee, in a formal statement focusing campaign efforts on congressional races, said that organization could not support the position of the two major presidential candidates. It added that "no national political party convention can bind senators and congressmen," who "are responsible only to their constituents for the manner in which they meet their official obligations."

THIRD PARTY FAILURE

The board of strategy last night discussed a proposal by Canon William S. Chase that drys support a third party movement and decided to center campaign efforts on senatorial and congressional races. Senator Borah, of Idaho, and Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, had been suggested by Canon Chase as third party leaders.

Dr. Ernest G. Cherrington, prominent board member, said the third party resolution had not received a second and that while not formally voted on, he felt the matter was closed so far as the board was concerned.

CONGRESS FIGHT

He explained:

"The place to support the Eighteenth Amendment is in Congress, and this board and probably all other dry organizations will center its support on candidates for Congress who are friends of prohibition."

The league statement told "the voters of the nation to study with great care the political party platforms, the public declarations and known records of the presidential candidates and to vote as in their judgment will best conserve and maintain the present prohibition policy unchanged."

DAVIS SEEKING TRIAL ALONE

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, obtained a court order yesterday directing United States Attorney George Z. Medalie to show cause why he should not be tried separately from three other defendants on charges involving an alleged fraternal lottery.

At the same time the Senator pleaded not guilty to a superseding indictment returned Thursday. The bond of $1,000 which he posted after pleading to the original indictment, was continued.

The order against Medalie is returnable Monday morning before Judge T. Blake Kennedy, of Wyoming, sitting in this district. Senator Davis said in his affidavit that if he were required to wait until the other defendants were ready for trial "a grave injustice would be done, not only to me, but to the electorate of the state of Pennsylvania."

Up for re-election in November, he said the indictment was being "made use of for political purposes" by his political foes.

E. PITTSBURGH AUTOIST KILLED

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—His head crushed against a post as an automobile crashed into a ditch on Delmont road, near Oakford Park, William Bennett, 25, of East Pittsburgh, was fatally injured early today.

He was riding with three other young men in the rumble seat of a small coupe when the car left the road.

George Jenkner, of 332 East Thirteenth avenue, Homestead, the driver, said headlights from an approaching car blinded him and the machine also sideswiped his.

Two Chances to Register for Election

Residents of cities in Allegheny County who have been assessed, still have two chances to qualify in order to vote at the November election.

September 20—Second registration day in Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Clairton and Duquesne. Pittsburgh polls will be open from 8 until 11 o'clock a. m. and from 5 until 11 o'clock p. m.; in other cities, 8 to 10 a. m.; noon to 3 p. m. and from 5 to 11 p. m. eastern daylight savings time.

October 8—Third and last registration day in the cities. This is also the last day to pay poll taxes. Only those regularly assessed can pay taxes.

September 7 was the last day to be assessed.

BERN MYSTERY DEEPENED

Bern butler, who insisted that, so far as he knew, there was no difference between the Berns.

He testified under oath at the Coroner's inquest that Bern kissed his wife goodbye as they parted, Sunday evening, and remarked:

"I'll be seeing you."

THINKS JEAN KNOWS

Simultaneously, Henry Bern denied that Dorothy Millette had anything to do with his brother's suicide. He added:

"I believe, though, Jean knows something of what caused my brother's death. What his note meant, I do not know. I talked to Miss Harlow for only 10 minutes and we did not discuss the motive. I can only say there is no question but that it was suicide. The motive is hypothetical and at best a conjecture. You see we are dealing with human emotions."

Henry Bern said he planned no active investigation, but would remain here "to await eventualities."

Collapsing as she returned to her home from the funeral of her husband, Miss Harlow was in seclusion, carefully guarded against intrusion. Whether she planned to talk again to Henry Bern about Paul's death was unknown. Bern was so shocked by news of Dorothy Millette's probable death he was unable to attend his brother's funeral.

SISTER COLLAPSES

In the silence of Grace Chapel, Inglewood Park Cemetery, broken only by the low undertone of music and the sobs of his stricken family, the last tributes were paid to the "Little Brother of Hollywood" by Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin and Conrad Nagel, screen star.

There was no sound from the little room where the black-clad Jean Harlow sat in a frozen sorrow, with her mother and stepfather.

But from the room where sat Paul Bern's sister, Mrs. Friedericka Marcus, there was the constant sound of sobbing and crying which terminated finally in her utter collapse after she had rushed toward the white gardenia-blanketed casket, crying:

"Oh, I must see his face!"

About 40 men and women, most of them famous in the film world, listened with tears as, in the silence of ancient words of the old Hebrews, Rabbi Magnin pronounced benediction on the soul of Paul Bern.

In the front pews sat Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg. Behind them were Joan Bennett, Lila Lee, Jetta Goudal, Edgar Selwyn, John Considine, Ed Mannix, Hunt Stromberg, Jack Conway, Carey Wilson and others of the film colony.

Search River and Bank For Jean's Phantom Rival

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 10.—(INS.)—Search for the body of Dorothy Millette, mystery woman in the Paul Bern suicide, centered today between Paintersville and Freeport bridges, 22 miles south of here on the Sacramento River.

It was between these two points that a woman believed to have been Miss Millette jumped from the river boat, Delta King, intending either to swim ashore or drown herself, according to Charles J. Ogle, criminal investigator of the sheriff's office here. He quoted the ship's first officer as saying:

"On the morning of Wednesday, September 7, I made my rounds as usual at 3:55 a. m. After the Delta King passed through the Paintersville bridge I made a round of the ship. Nothing appeared wrong.

"I made another round before the ship passed through the Freeport bridge, approximately at 5:20 a. m. On this round I found a pair of woman's slippers and a dark coat trimmed with brown fur on deck near the railing."

Officers were dragging the river.

Ogle said it was possible the woman may have swam ashore, and the river bank was being searched for footprints.

NOTED JEWISH GENERAL DIES

Holding the distinction of being the only Jewish general to serve in the Russian Army under the Czarist regime, Dr. Meyer Litow, 69, father of Abraham Litow, of Pittsburgh, died Monday at his home in Krzemieniec, Poland.

Gen. Litow

Gen. Litow, who visited his son here in 1923, entered the medical college at Kiev, Russia, in 1886. He joined the Russian Army in 1900 and served in the Japanese War, participating in the siege of Port Arthur. He was decorated twice in 1905. He entered the World War as a colonel and was promoted to the rank of general three months later. He received two decorations for bravery under fire.

Gen. Litow resided at his birthplace, Krazemieniec, formerly Russia, during the past year. He was president of the Medical Association of Poland and headed many Jewish and gentile philanthropic organizations. The son was preparing to leave here for Poland when news of Dr. Litow's death arrived. A widow and one daughter survive in Poland.

ROOSEVELT SET FOR INVASION OF WEST

Political Clouds Fade As Governor Plans Bid for Farm Vote

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

ALBANY, Sept. 10.—For almost the first time since his nomination, Gov Franklin D. Roosevelt was able today to give his whole attention to his campaign for the presidency.

Political embarrassments have dogged the Governor ever since the Chicago convention. There was the Walker case, Al Smith's silence, and Tammany's coolness. Now the political skies are clearing and Gov. Roosevelt will turn westward next week in the belief that everything at home is all right.

SMITH AID EXPECTED

The Walker case is settled to the extent that it is out of the Governor's hands. Those around Gov. Roosevelt will be surprised if the ex-Mayor makes good his threat to run for re-election on a "vindication" platform. They expect that Al Smith soon will come into line for the national ticket. And Tammany's coolness is rapidly losing its frigidity—as evidenced by yesterday's meeting of the state committee.

John F. Curry himself offered the resolution which pledged Tammany's "active and loyal support" to the Roosevelt-Garner ticket. It was unanimously adopted. Later the Tammany chieftain and his allies called upon Gov. Roosevelt at the executive mansion and everybody was smiling when they left.

The first major speech of Gov. Roosevelt's western trip is scheduled for Topeka, Kan., on Wednesday. There in the home town of Vice President Curtis, and in the heart of the grain belt, the Democratic nominee will make a speech for which the agarian West has been waiting—outlining his views on agricultural relief.

BORAH AWAITS SPEECH

Indicative of the interest in this speech was Senator William E. Borah's statement to International News Service that the election would be decided west of the Mississippi River, and that it would be determined by the agricultural relief programs yet to be enunciated by the rival presidential candidates. Borah intimated, although he did not assert it, that his support would go to the candidate who offered the most definite program for agricultural relief.

Gov. Roosevelt plans to devote a great deal of time and care to this Topeka speech. He regards it as one of the most, if not the most important utterances he will make during the campaign.

Gov. Roosevelt plans to spend today and tomorrow at his Hyde Park home, returning to Albany either late Sunday or early Monday morning. Monday night he will leave on his swing through the West, which will carry him through a score of states to the Pacific coast and back.

HOOVER TO SHUN PARTY TALKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Everett Sanders, Republican national chairman, announced today that President Hoover will make no "partisan speeches" during the presidential campaign.

Telling of the President's plan not to make a "personal campaign," Sanders said:

"That does not mean that he won't make any speeches at all. He may make a speech or two in the West and probably one in the East, but they will not be partisan speeches."

He said no consideration had been given to the selection of dates for the addresses.

Sanders, who is director-in-chief of the Hoover-Curtis campaign forces, came here to discuss the ballot drive with Eastern leaders.

Society Women Win Bet as Seamstresses

MRS. GEORGE C. BURGWIN, JR. ..... SEWED FOR FRIENDS

Scores of Dresses For Sports Wear Made by Pair

When you see one of those sporty seersucker dresses on the golf links or at the hunt club, you can't go far wrong in guessing its seamstresses to have been the two prominent socialites, Mrs. George Burgwin and Mrs. Lawrence Blair.

Although the depression is not to be altogether discounted as a motive, it was a bet that launched them into the venture. Friends bet they couldn't make a dress. And the friends were wrong.

Since May Mrs. Burgwin and Mrs. Blair have enjoyed a success to make professional tailors jealous, selling more than a hundred of their dresses and being forced to turn down many requests.

Taking orders from acquaintances only, the social seamstresses' working day was from 9 to 4:30. They received calls at the sewing machine. Mrs. Burgwin said:

"We worked awfully hard; but got a great deal of fun out of it nevertheless."

They are undecided whether to continue this fall.

FRENCH REBUFF ARMS DEMAND

PARIS, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The council of ministers, with President Lebrun presiding, approved unanimously today the text of the French reply to Germany's aide memoire demanding equality of armaments.

The reply, among other things, points out that the German demand calls for a revision of the Versailles treaty and that such a procedure could not be taken by France and Germany, but should be proposed to the League of Nations.

The reply will be delivered today to the German government by the French ambassador at Berlin.

PRICE OF MILK UP ONE CENT

Beginning next Friday, residents of Western Pennsylvania will pay a cent a quart more for milk, as the result of an agreement reached yesterday in the Mayfair Hotel between delegates of the Dairyman's Co-operative Sales Association and representatives of milk companies of the city.

Dealers said the increase was caused by the higher price asked by dairymen. The dairymen first demanded $2 a hundredweight for class A milk, and $1.50 a hundred weight for class B milk.

The distributors offered $1.90 for the first and $1.35 for the second grade. The farmers countered with a demand of $1.95 and $1.44, which was adopted after several hours' deadlock.

Farmers said that their increase amounts to 28 cents a hundredweight, and that of the dealers, 18 cents a hundredweight. The distributor will gain about two cents a gallon, farmers said. The new retail price will be 10 cents a quart delivered and eight cents at the stores.

might pauperize the unemployed head of a large family.

The theatrical men say, with some reason, that part of the seven millions a year, taken from theaters, in taxation, might well be returned to the theaters, as the gasoline tax is used on new roads.

TRUSTEES OF the Presbyterian College at Clinton, South Carolina, passed a resolution permitting students to dance on the campus.

Now the Presbyterian synod of South Carolina asks that the decision be reversed. It rejects a suggestion that students of the college be forbidden to dance anywhere, but decides that they must not dance on college property.

This sounds strange in jazz regions of the north. Yet, it is not so long since New York State made it an offense against the law to display flowers in your window, or kiss your wife, on Sunday.

U. S. ENVOY ACTS TO QUELL JAP WAR FEAR

Grew, Uchida Meeting To Discuss Uproar Over Photo Taking

TOKIO, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The storm of protest which has developed during the last two days over the photographing of a number of Japanese business and industrial buildings by the National City Bank of New York assumed a more serious aspect today and led to diplomatic action.

Delegations from several Japanese patriotic societies visited the branch of the bank at Osaka and attempted to intimidate its Japanese employes. Osaka newspapers came out again with full pages devoted to protests against the photographing and printed a number of other reports to hint the United States was making other preparations for possible war.

U. S. AMBASSADOR ACTS

Ambassador Joseph C. Grew immediately arranged for an interview with the Japanese foreign minister, Count Uchida, and called on him at the Foreign Office this afternoon.

The newspaper charges, which included a long list of American activities, such as the presence of the American fleet in the Pacific, an alleged cruise of three airplane carriers along the Kurile Islands, and establishment of new American air bases on the Aleutian Islands, also were broadcast over the semi-official radio station at Osaka.

The charge that the bank's photographs might get into the hands of the United States War Department for use in mapping targets for air bombing raids was reiterated.

SERIOUS CHARGES

The newspaper Kokumin Shimbun, which led the criticism, said there were many "manifestations of serious intentions of America against Japan."

It also published prominently a report that Americans were sending many bombing planes to Hangchow, China, to assist the Chinese army in establishing an air base.

Earlier in the day, the American embassy asked the Japanese government to issue a statement exonerating the National City Bank and to assert that thorough investigation showed the charges to be utterly unfounded, but the government did not immediately accede to the request.

RESERVE RULING ON FIREMEN

Decision was reserved today following a hearing by the city Civil Service Commission on Delos Harvey's appeal against his dismissal as a city fireman by James M. Clark, Director of Public Safety, and Mayor Charles H. Kline.

Assistant City Solicitor Harry Diamond opened the hearing with a motion that Harvey's appeal be dismissed. Diamond said:

"When an official does anything like this he is condemned. He is damned if he does and damned if he doesn't. The newspapers always shout 'politics'."

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, defending Harvey, said:

"If it is true, as Clark is quoted as saying, that the records of the men were not considered, why have a Civil Service Commission?

"We might as well save the taxpayers' money."

Commissioner J. Howard Devlin said no decision will be given until a transcript of testimony is given.

NORMAN HOME, KEEPS SILENCE

LIVERPOOL, England, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—Still attempting to hide his movements behind the cloak of secrecy which shrouded his entire trip to the United States, Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, tried to hide from reporters today as he returned to England's shores.

Norman left his first class quarters on the liner Duchess of Bedford via the third class gangplank, but wary newspapermen were waiting for him, eager with questions on rumored war debt negotiations.

Immediately boarding a waiting boat train for London, Norman said tersely:

"I'm not talking."

COUNTY BUT NOT STATE HEADS' NAMES ON BRIDGE

Precedent Followed On Joint Project, Engineer Says

When state officials and other dignitaries go to East Pittsburgh today to see their new bridge across the Westinghouse valley they will find no granite graven monuments to themselves. To all appearances the bridge will be just a county project instead of a joint state and county job as is really the case.

Carved in the granite are the names of county officials, including commissioners and engineers, and that of the contractor who built the bridge, but not a state official is mentioned.

The bridge was built jointly. Allegheny County officials are understood to be displeased because the state, instead of using its own funds in the project, is said to have diverted federal cash.

TWO GRANITE CARVINGS ON THE GEORGE WESTINGHOUSE MEMORIAL BRIDGE ... DO YOU SEE A STATE OFFICIAL'S NAME?

Chief Engineer V. R. Covell, of Allegheny County, says there is no precedent for putting the name of the Governor or any state official on such monuments and that in putting on the names he did, he followed directions of the County Commissioners.

Quilting Bee Helping Woman Fight Jail Term

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—An old-fashioned quilting bee has been adopted by Milwaukee clubwomen for funds to appeal to the the State Supreme Court the case of Mrs. Peggy Seely, who twice chose to go to jail rather than pay a $25 fine on a speeding charge.

Protesting what she termed the "case-a-minute racket" in District Court, Mrs. Seely fought the case through several stages in Circuit and Municipal Court, but each time she lost. She insisted she was not given a fair hearing in District Court.

Now Mrs. Seely and other clubwomen are working daily on a "comforter" which the Milwaukee County Federation of Women's Clubs plans to use as the grand prize of a series of card parties, the proceeds of which will be donated to the appeal fund.

Mrs. Seely said she would have preferred to drop the case long ago, but feels herself obligated to carry on in behalf of other motorists who might be "railroaded."

TWO BROTHERS SEIZED IN SERIES OF BANDIT RAIDS HERE

ONE SUSPECTED OF KENTUCKY SLAYING

Wife Arrested, Guns And Coins Found In Home

Taxi drivers' memory for faces was responsible for the arrest of two brothers, one a paroled convict said to be wanted on a murder charge in Covington, Ky., another man and three women, who were all ordered held for investigation in connection with a series of racket and taxi holdups at a hearing in Central Police Court today.

The brothers, Sidney Allen Floyd, 30, paroled convict, said to be wanted on the murder charge, and Paul Floyd, 32, both of Covington, were arrested last night at Miltenberger and Tustin streets after taxicab drivers reported they resembled men who held them up several weeks ago.

WOMEN ARRESTED

Following the arrest of the brothers, Paul's wife, Mrs. Emma Floyd, 25, domestic in a Munhall road, Squirrel Hill home; Mrs. Lula Hahn, 37, and Effie Laisch, 35, both of 1839 Tustin street, and Howard Smith, 37, of 418 Third avenue, were also arrested.

Sidney Floyd is accused as one of the four bandits who shot to death Myron Smith in the holdup of his Covington store, July 18.

Magistrate Thomas D. Jones asked Sidney, at the hearing, if he was connected with the murder. Pointing to his Bertillon pictures and description, Sidney said:

"Well, that's my picture and my record."

In Mrs. Floyd's room Detective Walter Monaghan reported finding three revolvers and a bag containing several hundred pennies. The coins were said to be part of the loot obtained in the holdup of a numbers establishment. One of the revolvers, according to Monaghan, had been used in the Smith murder.

The younger Floyd served two terms of two years each in the Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus and a sentence in the Mansfield (O.) Reformatory. He was paroled from the London prison farm in Ohio. He was arrested in Cincinnati for carrying concealed weapons, and jumped a $500 bond there.

DANCE BLOCKED BY COURT WRIT

Conduct of a dance, one of a series of "International Youth Day Dances," under the auspices of "International Day of Struggle of Young Workers Against Bosses' War," scheduled for last night in a hall at 35-39 Miller street, was enjoined by an injunction granted late yesterday in Common Pleas Court by Judge Samuel H. Gardner.

The injunction was asked by the Labor Lyceum, which sold the property February 3, 1931, to H. Lichtenstal, who three days later sold it to M. L. Obester, under a deed which provided the hall should not be used for club, social, meeting, public assembly or similar private or communal purposes.

Billie Burke to Star In West Coast Play

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Billie Burke, stage and screen actress and widow of Florenz Ziegfeld, has decided to remain on the Pacific Coast a few months longer so that she may star in the old stage success "Marquise."

The play, she said, will go into rehearsal shortly and will be produced in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland.

Child Hurt in Park, Parents Sue City

The city negligently permitted a rubber hose to lie on the walk around the children's swimming pool at Highland Park August 1 and Rhea Wolk, 11, tripped over it and fell, suffering injuries which left a scar on her forehead, it was charged in a suit filed by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Wolk, of the East End. It sought $25,000 damages.

Morning Services Resume Tomorrow

The 11 a. m. service at the First Unitarian Church will be resumed tomorrow. During the summer the Rev. Frank Edwin Smith, pastor, spent several weeks in New England attending church conferences. He returned last week and tomorrow morning will speak on "Building Altars to the Human Spirit."

DOUGLAS READY TO ASK WRIT

Any attempt made to move equipment placed by John Douglas, Jr., on the Allegheny River wharf at the foot of Stanwix street will result immediately in application for an injunction, according to Attorney Walter F. Michael, counsel for Douglas.

Douglas, who has signed agreements with the Hoisting Engineers union to unionize all sand and gravel hoists operated by his new Union Sand Company, is being recommended to contractors by the union officials as a source of sand and gravel satisfactory to them.

The strike on the new postoffice, which started in the sand and gravel dispute, today appeared no nearer settlement. A report of an investigating committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce is expected early next week.

Infant Dies When Blaze Sweeps Home

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Sept. 10.—A 13-month-old infant perished yesterday in a fire which destroyed the home of Miss Laura Baker, of Center Township. The child, Rou Beck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beck, was suffocated as he slept in his crib on the second floor. Five other children of the Beck's were rescued.

INCREASE MADE HERE IN RELIEF ALLOTMENTS

Emergency Association Boosts Orders by 33 1-3 Per Cent

Food and other orders for relief in the city will be increased 33⅓ per cent starting Monday.

The action was taken by the Allegheny County Emergency Association following assurance, through signing of the Steedle bill giving county poor directors power to issue bonds for relief purposes, that the county will soon have sufficient funds for relief.

The action raises the relief for families in the city, only, from $3 weekly per family of five, to $4 per family of five. Former level, to which organizations are expected to go as soon as possible, is $4.50 weekly for a family of five.

Meanwhile, S. E. Claney, director of the association, announced investigation of distribution of government flour by the Twenty-first Ward Relief Association had shown no connection with politics.

Claney's statement came following taking over of the Twenty-first Ward Association's duties by the district branch of the Family Welfare Association. Claney said:

"The association deserves the highest commendation for the work it has done in its particular community."

Meanwhile, the possibility of Pennsylvania obtaining its share of the Federal $300,000,000 for relief aid was being discussed in Pittsburgh today.

Officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday answered Gov. Gifford Pinchot's criticism of their delay in awarding aid to Pennsylvania with a statement that they were waiting presentation of requested facts and figures by State officials.

It is thought that passage of the Talbot act, giving $12,000,000 of state money to counties, has satisfied the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that Pennsylvania has done its share to help the destitute.

State Cuts Red Tape To Speed Assistance

HARRISBURG, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Slashing red tape and eliminating delay at the central offices here, the State Emergency Relief Board has caught up with its task of distributing the $1,500,000 September allocation of the $12,000,000 state relief appropriation voted by the recent special session of the General Assembly.

The board announced approval of the local agencies authorized to distribute about $600,000 of the September money in 26 counties. Included in this group was Philadelphia, to which 55,000 food forms, representing $350,000, were sent.

W. B. Rodgers, executive director of the board, emphasized that the entire month's total of $1,500,000 is available for immediate use, regardless of whether the counties are included in the list issued yesterday.

All counties now have emergency relief boards which are authorized to distribute the full county share of the September money as direct relief. Approval of the state board is required, he said, only where some of the money is to be used for work relief or where the county boards plan to disburse funds through existing local relief agencies.

Official state food orders are being printed and sent to all county boards as rapidly as possible. Meanwhile, the county groups have been instructed that until such blanks are received the state board will approve all forms used to make relief available to needy persons.

QUIZ 2 IN DEATH OF RECLUSE

BEAVER, Pa., Sept. 10.—Harry Fink, 30, and Robert Stekarich, 16, of Independence Township, arrested in connection with robbery of the Dawson road stand near the home of Martin Patton, 85-year-old recluse, found murdered and robbed, Labor Day, are held for questioning as possible suspects by District Attorney A. B. Dreastrique.

When Fink was arrested he was operating a 10-gallon still, county detectives reported. Dreastrique, who has taken personal charge of the investigation of the murder of Patton, declares the aged recluse was robbed of about $400 by his killers.

the probers hoped to establish the cause of the blast, which flung bodies of the victims flying through the air to their watery graves.

One theory was that salt water was used in the boilers, constructed for fresh water use.

The investigators, representing federal authorities through United States Attorney George Z. Medalie and the United States steamboat inspection service, Bronx District Attorney Charles B. McLaughlin, and Police Commissioner Mulrooney, of New York, were prepared also to sift reports the Iron Workers' Union recently complained of the unseaworthiness of the Observation.

Dickerson N. Hoover, assistant director of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, was to arrive here today to participate in the vigorous inquiry.

CAPTAIN INJURED

Alexander Forsythe, captain of the boat, who was injured in the blast, was under guard at a hospital, although no arrests were made so far in connection with the disaster.

He was too weak to be questioned at length. He said:

"I cannot account for the accident. We were just backing out when the boiler blew."

Forsythe's father, George, 66, pilot of the vessel, was killed in the holocaust. The son was listed as owner of the boat.

Mayor McKee, who visited the scene of the wreck to ascertain if steps were taken to extend any needed help to families of victims and survivors of the explosion, took a hand in the investigation by conferring with officials of the District Attorney's office to map out a course of action.

Boy, Fire Rescuer, Dies Disdaining Hero Role

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Billy Styler, 15-year-old high school boy, saved two girls' lives at the expense of his own and never realized he played the hero's part.

He died in a hospital here yesterday of burns suffered in rescuing them from a flaming garage.

His mother sat beside him in his last moments and told him how proud she was of the heroism.

But Billy wasn't impressed and insisted he had done nothing unusual. He said:

"Aw, shucks! I didn't do anything. I had to take care of the girls, didn't I?"

He was pouring gasoline into a container at his grandmother's garage. The girls, Camille Sanborn and Clarabelle Trunsler, both 15, stood by lookin on.

Suddenly an automobile backfired, ignited the gasoline, and the three were showered with flaming fluid.

Billy seized the burning can and carried it to the street. Te flames seared him from head to foot. The girls escaped through the door without serious burns.

Window Shattered In Fight, 2 Held

Two men who are alleged by police to have broken a window of Max Barzen, a florist, at 817 East street, seeking an attendant with whom they had quarreled earlier in the evening, were under arrest in North Side Police Station today. They are Peter Eyeman, 26, of 631 Suismon street, and Joseph Toth, 36, of 1014 Madison avenue.

U. S. Hospital Chief Fined for Fishing

IRONTON, O., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Dr. E. J. Rose, of Washington, chief of the United States Veterans' Hospitals, was fined $25 and costs yesterday for fishing without a license.

Asks Court to Let Nickname Be His Real One

Because he has always been known to his friends and associates by the nickname "Chappie" and not until recently by either of his two given names, Samuel Bowne Wright, 26, of 7139 Thomas boulevard, asked Judge Samuel H. Gardner for permission to change his name to Samuel Chapman Wright.

He said he was born in Peekskill, N. Y., coming to Pittsburgh two years later. His nickname, he declares, has caused confusion between new friends and old, and it is a source of embarrassment to him in his business relations. He is employed as a clerk.

Man Hurt in Mine Dies of Pneumonia

John Mullin, 45, a coal miner of Valga, Washington County, died yesterday in the Mercy Hospital from pneumonia that developed from injuries suffered a week ago when he was struck by a coal car while working near the Gilmore Mine of the Valga Coal Company.

Pastor to Address American Council

The Rev. W. H. Dean, pastor of the Warren Methodist Episcopal Church, will speak at a meeting of the True American Improvement Council, Sunday, in the Center avenue branch of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Lily Pons Admits Wreck Of Marital Happiness

By AROXELLAS GALVAO

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 10.—Mlle. Lily Pons, young French diva of the Metropolitan Opera Company, says that she does not want to live with August Mesritz, her husband, and that she does not want to marry again.

Acceding to requests for clarification of reports that she is estranged from Mesritz, Mlle. Pons admitted yesterday that she seeks a separation, although no divorce proceedings are impending. Mlle. Pons said:

"I want to explain that I do not plan to divorce M. Mesritz.

"I am busy with a 5-year contract.

"It is a fact that I have separated from my husband, and have been separated from him since April. I do not want to live with him any longer.

"But I am not planning a divorce. This is only a separation."

Lily denied again that she proposes to become the wife of a young and wealthy Argentinian landowner. She said:

"I know enough about marriage. I want no more of it."

Mlle. Pons said that on her return to America, she will visit Los Angeles until November, when she will return to New York to fulfill Metropolitan Opera engagements. She will sail from Rio on September 15.

SHOCKED CONGREGATION MOURNS DEATH OF DR. PETTY

RITES OF NOTED PASTOR BEING ARRANGED

Arrangements for the funeral of the Rev. Dr C. Wallace Petty, who died last night at his home, 4425 Schenley Farms terrace, were being completed today as members of the congregation of the First Baptist Church, of which he had been pastor 10 years, mourned.

One of Pittsburgh's best known ministers, an active civic worker and widely known as an after-dinner speaker, Dr. Petty apparently had been enjoying good health.

He spent yesterday about his usual duties, retiring early to his study. It was here that his lifeless body was found shortly before midnight following the return of his family from a visit with friends. Apoplexy was given as the cause of death in a report to the county morgue.

Dr. Petty was born in Topeka, Kan., August 23, 1884. In his youth his family moved to California where he attended public and high school, graduating from Dixon (Cal.) High School in 1902. Four years later he won his B. L. degree at Occidental College and began a three-year course in divinity school at Rochester Theological Seminary.

He was ordained July 9, 1909, at New Brighton, Staten Island, New York, where he remained until 1910, when he was called to the Creston Avenue Baptist Church, New York. On April 15, 1912, he came to Pittsburgh to accept his present charge. He was a member of the Union League and Quill Clubs of New York, the Shannopin Country Club and the University Club of Pittsburgh. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a Shriner.

Dr. Petty leaves his wife and two daughters, Miss Barbara and Miss Jessie.

Two Former Pastors To Occupy Pulpit

Two former pastors will occupy the pulpit of the Immanuel Lutheran Church, Murray avenue and Flemington street, Sunday when the twenty-fifth anniversary of the congregation is observed. The Rev. F. Luley, of Milwaukee, will speak at the morning service and at night the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. F. J. Schumm, of Elyria, O. The Rev. H. W. Romoser is pastor.

SILVER JUBILEE AT ST. LUKE'S

For two months, members of the congregation of the St. Luke's Evangelical Church, Ridgewood and Center avenues, West View, have been collecting 1907 coins in a crucible campaign to end September 18, the silver jubilee of the church. Besides the illuminated crucible in the vestibule of the church, each Sunday School class has its special barrel, in which 1907 coins and those too smooth to recognize the date, are placed.

Metal articles containing gold and silver also are being contributed. The money from the campaign will be used for a payment on the church in November, according to the Rev. Luther P. Spoehr, pastor.

In further celebration of the Silver Jubilee, a memorial stone will be placed in the platform of the Sunday School room on September 18. It will contain pictures of all members, a handwritten Bible contributed by the Luther League and interesting programs of 1932. The lead box containing these articles will be reopened in 1957 on the fiftieth anniversary of the church.

A special musical program has been arranged as a feature of the Silver Jubilee on September 22. The Proto Club, a Sunday School class of girls taught by Mrs. Charles Schwartz, is sponsoring the Neville Operatic and Concert Singers in West View Junior High School on September 22. The proceeds go to the church. The Singers are under the direction of John Lawrence Rodrigues, director, with Gladys Schade Klabor, accompanist.

FATHER COYNE TO BE HONORED

More than 75 priests and prelates of the Catholic church will participate in the golden jubilee anniversary mass "coram Pontifici" at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Forty-sixth street, tomorrow morning, commemorative of the ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Dr. Charles J. Coyne, pastor of St. Mary's.

The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese will preside in the sanctuary and others to participate are the Rt. Rev. Mark Gannon, bishop of the Erie Diocese, the Rt. Rev. Alfred Koch, Arch Abbot of St. Vincent Archabbey, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Bernard Conley, chancellor of the Altoona Diocese and the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Martin M. Ryan, of Pittsburgh, one of the oldest priests in the diocese.

The mass will take place at 11 o'clock. Father Coyne was ordained at St. Vincent in 1882 and has been pastor of St. Mary's 20 years.

Community Services To End Tomorrow

The Sunday night community services in the North Boroughs close tomorrow night. The Rev. J. Norman Hunter, president of the Ministerial Association, will be the speaker. His topic will be "Jesus the Son of God." The services are held on the lawn of the Bellevue Y. M. C. A., Lincoln avenue.

Visit to Be Made To Home for Aged

The annual pilgrimage to the German Protestant Home for the Aged, in the South Hills, will take place tomorrow afternoon. An open-air service is to be held on the lawn of the home at 3 o'clock.

UNION SERVICES TO START

Beginning tomorrow night, churches of the Squirrel Hill district will begin their community evening services. the congregations of the Third United Presbyterian Church, Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church and the Sixth Presbyterian Church uniting for one evening service. The services are to be held in the Eixth church, and the speaker tomorrow night will be the Rev. Dr. Jacob S. Payton, pastor of Asbury.

The initial sermon will be entitled "Who Imperil America—the Underprivileged or the Overprivileged?" Dr. Payton, Dr. H. H. Forsyth and Dr. W. M. Woodfin will preach on successive Sunday evenings.

PASTOR TO URGE RESIGNATION OF KLINE

The religious and political outlook of Pittsburgh is to be discussed tomorrow night by the Rev. W. H. Hanna, pastor of the Knoxville Christian Church, Knox avenue, in his sermon, "Is There Any Hope for Pittsburgh?"

Mr. Hanna is expected to suggest that Mayor Charles H. Kline follow the example of Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, and resign.

The Hilltop clergyman said today that the citizens of Pittsburgh must pay more attention to the type of men they elected to public office if they wished their city to advance and prosper. He said that Judge Frank P. Patterson had expressed the views of hundreds of citizens when he took to task the constables who in their "blind men's parade" reported their districts free from vice and crime.

Mr. Hanna said he intended to contrast Pittsburgh and New York, where the highest public official in each city has been under fire. He said that Mayor Walker resigned and it was a good example to place before Mayor Kline. He also suggested that Mayor Kline should follow the example set by Joseph V. McKee, the new mayor of New York—that of reducing his salary in this time of depression.

The main question he intends to ask, is: How far is Pittsburgh going to get under the present political and religious condition?

Sharpsburg Pastor To Give 2 Sermons

The Rev. K. L. Cramer, of the First Baptist Church, Sharpsburgh, will preach both the morning and evening sermons tomorrow. At 10:45 o'clock he will speak on "The Believer's Past and Present." At 7:45 p. m. he will speak on "The Horror of Failure."

Pastor to Preach In Morning Only

The Rev. Dr. W. M Baumgartner, pastor of the Mary S. Brown Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, Beechwood boulevard, will speak on "An Effective Church," at his service tomorrow morning. There will not be an evening service.

OPEN WALTHER LEAGUE STATE CONVENTION

Twenty-three societies of the Walther League, an organization composed of young people of the Lutheran churches, are represented at the thirteenth annual convention of the Pennsylvania district of the league which opened this afternoon in St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, North avenue and Middle street, North Side. The league societies of the North Side church are hosts to the convention.

Among the members of the junior and senior societies of St. Matthew's Church arranging for the convention are Miss Mildred Rogers, chairman; Mary Dille, president of the Junior League, and Wilmer Pracht, president of the Senior League.

The present membership of the Walther League is more than 50,000 joined in 1,800 societies. There are 23 societies in this district. This afternoon the Rev Eric Malte, of Braddock, opened the convention with devotional exercises, and Herbert Grau, of Dormont, president of the district, then took charge. Reports and elections were included in the day's business.

Tomorrow afternoon another session will be held, at which time Prof. O. P. Kretzmann, of the Concordia Seminary, at Springfield, Ill., will present the work of the international society of the Walther League. Tomorrow night there will be an inspirational service, and Prof. Kretzman will again speak.

2 ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

The Rev. M. Herbert Messner, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Brownsville road, and who is supply pastor at the North Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, Brownsville road, will deliver two anniversary sermons Sunday morning, one in each church.

The congregation of the North Zion Church this month will observe the one hundred and thirty-second anniversary and special sermons will be delivered each Sunday. Tomorrow morning at 9:30, Mr. Messner will speak on "The Family," and family day will be observed.

A similar sermon will be delivered at 10:45 o'clock in the Redeemer church, which this month has its thirtieth anniversary. The second sermon also will be on "The Family" and family day will be observed.

Choirs at Epiphany In Special Program

The "Missa in hon. Scti. Francisci Assisiensis," the celebrated composition of Remigio Renzi, will be presented in four voices at the 11 o'clock mass in Epiphany Church, Washington street, tomorrow morning. The program will be offered by the combined junior and senior choirs in the loft and the surpliced boys choir in the sanctuary, under the direction of Prof. John Sedlacek. The Rev. Lawrence A. O'Connell, pastor, will deliver a special sermon.

Anti-Saloon League Men to Fill Pulpits

Two speakers for the Pittsburgh district of the Anti-Saloon League will speak in church here Sunday morning. Dr. David E. Cruea, superintendent of the Pittsburgh district, will speak at 11 a. m. in the Mt. Lebanon Methodist Episcopal Church on "What About Prohibition Now?" At the same hour Prof. I. C. Keller, of the California Normal School, will speak in the First Evangelical Church, Center avenue and Graham street.

Dr. Day to Start Series on America

The Rev. Dr. Albert Edward Day, of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, will begin a series of sermons to be broadcast over radio station WWSW each Sunday night for the next four weeks. The series will be on the general theme, "America Through a Prophet's Spectacles." The sermon tomorrow night will be entitled "Ballyhoo."

Volunteers to Hold Religious Forum

A religious open forum will be conducted at the Sunday night service in the Volunteers of America Church, Sandusky and East North Diamond streets. The forum will be conducted by Staff Capt. George H. Hotchkiss and the sermon will be delivered by Capt. Cyrus Hoffman. Capt. Hoffman will speak on "Unity Between the True Believer and God."

'Substance' Subject In Science Church

"Substance" will be the subject of the lesson sermon to be read in all Christian Science churches tomorrow. The golden text will be: "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you; for him hath God the Father sealed."

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
-With-
Patricia Pitt

The final weeks of the season at Watch Hill, R. I., are gayer and gayer. I've just had a letter from there with news of all sorts of dinners and luncheons and arrivals and departures.

First of all, the Roy A. Hunts, who are summering at Watch Hill, were the guests recently of the Richard Beatty Mellons and their daughter, Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife, on the Mellon's private car. They took a trip in Canada.

Mellons Guests

Mrs. Hunt deserted the party after a few days to visit her sons at camp in New Hampshire, and then remained to see the total eclipse of the sun, visible from there.

The Mellons spent one day at Watch Hill with the Hunts. And that day the Hunts gave a luncheon at the Misquamicut Golf Club for them. The Mellons did not open their Watch Hill cottage, Sunshine, this year at all.

The Hunts had as a recent guest Mrs. Mortimer Miller, Mrs. Hunt's mother.

J. Frederic Byers, Jr., son of the J. Frederic Byerses, of Sewickley Heights, was the guest recently of popular Jane Johnson, daughter of the Andrew Johnsons, of St. Louis, at her parents' Watch Hill home.

During his stay, Jane gave a dinner party at the Misquamicut Golf Club for him. There was dancing, too.

To Stay Till 20th

Mrs. Harry Darlington, Jr., plans to stay at her Watch Hill place until the twentieth. Her son, Harry Darlington, III, will go to the Brooks School, and the younger children, Cully and little Elaine, will attend the Sewickley Academy.

Mrs. Darlington gave a dinner in her home recently for her house guests, her brother-in-law and sister, the Robert L. Clarksons, of Long Island.

Mrs. William N. Frew has returned home after spending some time at the Ocean House, Watch Hill.

Among the patronesses for the program given Thursday night by Miss Louise Alice Williams, raconteur of Negro folklore, interspersed with cabin songs, were Mrs. William S. Moorhead, Mrs. William Reed Thompson and Mrs. Darlington.

The Howard Hale McClintics are among those planning a fall visit to Hot Springs, Va. The B. R. Shrivers have been spending some time there.

* * *

Mrs. Neill S. Brown, III, of Sewickley, and her young daughter, Ann Howard Brown, will sail tonight on the Champlain for Europe. Ann is going to study at the Brilliantmont School in Switzerland this winter. Her mother will return to the States after seeing her daughter established at school.

Girls' Auxiliary Continues Work In Summer

Among the few clubs that are active during the summer is the Girls' Auxiliary to the Woman's Library Club of Knoxville. Looking over the new year books one finds mention of assistance having been given during the summer with the distribution of food to Knox School children.

The club season, however, is formally opening this afternoon with a corn roast at South Park and on the twenty-seventh there will be the president's reception. A bake sale and a Hallowe'en party, a reception for the club sponsors and the distribution of Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets, also a Christmas luncheon with Mrs. J. M. Steim as honor guest are the 1932 events.

In the new year there's to be a bridge party and an old-fashioned costume party, a valentine party, a visit to the Carrick Juniors, and a bridge party at Utility Hall and then, a special spring event, to which has been given the original name of "whatever-you-wish shower" for the needy. The last events are a mother and daughter banquet and a bridge luncheon.

Reception Held For Congress' New Board

A decidedly clever speech couched throughout in motoring terms was made yesterday by Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Clubs. The occasion was a reception to the new members of the board and nearly 200 Congress members attended. Mrs. Stahlman, looking smart in a flowered chiffon and small black vet hat, received in the lounge with the board and the social chairman, Mrs. Walter J. Reid.

The program took place in the auditorium and was chiefly notable for the music and for the president's message. She advised her listeners to tighten up their desire to get along, to pour out a few drops of human kindness, to inspect their lights and brakes and use the latter when necessary, to fill the radiator with clear thought, good judgment and quick decision, to get out of neutral, avoid detours and drive on the broad highway to success.

Mrs. James G. Chalfant, district president, was introduced, and in a few words asked the visiting presidents to study the needs of their communities and plan ahead. The music, which was especially enjoyable, consisted of baritone solos by Percy Dorrington, with Edward Koontz at the piano, and numbers by the Florentine Quartet, under the direction of A. Angel.

At the prettily appointed tea table with its center bowl of roses and its triads of pink candles, Mrs. Frank O. Graham and Mrs. H. G. Taylor presided.

Flower Exhibit To Be Held on Tuesday

Among the several clubs beginning activities next week is the Bryn Mawr Farms Woman's Club which has scheduled a flower exhibit for Tuesday in Mrs. H. A. Travers' garden.

Mrs. Graham Netting is to speak and has given her talk the pleasing title of "Let's Go Gardening."

Speakers visiting the club later in the year are C. Stanton Belfour, who will talk on "Washington Among Our Hills;" Attorney Ella Graubart, whose subject is "Some Crises in Woman's Life;" Mrs. Paul Patton Faris, who will describe "Secrets and Symbols of Chinese Art;" giving a travelogue; Dr. C. E. Skinner, giving a travelogue; George E. Vaughn, speaking on furs, and Miss Karen Fladoes, whose demonstrated subject will be "Serving Attractive Meals at an Attractive Price."

Birth Control League Forced to Cut Clinics

For lack of funds the Birth Control League of Allegheny County is forced to cut its clinic sessions from eight to two each month. Also it has been found necessary to charge applicants a nominal fee. When a fund has been built up the clinics will open again to their former number. Under the present regime headquarters will be open only on the first Thursday of each month, both morning and afternoon, the work being carried on by volunteers.

In view of the fact that the Allegheny County League gave assistance to 800 women in the 16 months that it was open (this was a greater number than in any other city over the same length of time) those at the head of the league feel certain that its need is a desperate one, especially under existing economic conditions.

Many Americans Attend Races In England

Universal Service Special Cable

LONDON. — Scotland still claims the majority of fashionables, but the famous Yorkshire race meeting at Doncaster is also a society gathering place.

The St. Leger Stakes found many Americans in the paddock, among them Lord and Lady Charles Cavendish. Lady Cavendish was formerly Adele Astaire. She and her husband were guests of Charles Winn at Nostell Priory.

With the August exodus over London is growing livelier every day. Among the society folk staying at Dorchester House are Gen. and Mrs. Devore, of Washington. They have been entertaining quietly among military and diplomatic circles.

Entertaining at Dorchester House also are Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint, of Washington, who recently arrived from Scravenhague, the Dutch resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Birch are also in London. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutton have left after a two-month sojourn. They are going to Biarritz, where their daughter, Barbara, stayed throughout the season.

The Earl and Countess of Lincoln will have as their guests this month the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. John Monk, who are here on their wedding trip from New York. The Countess was formerly Jean Van Voorhees Banks, of New York.

Monk is a civil engineer, a graduate of Cambridge University. His bride is the former Gwendolyn Lewis, daughter of Dr. Robert Lewis, of New York.

Aspinwall Woman's Club To Hold Picnic Tuesday

A picnic in the orchard at Shady Side Academy on Tuesday will be the initial event for the literature and arts department of the Aspinwall Woman's Club. Mrs. H. J. Volker is chairman of the department and the committee for the inaugural affair is Mrs. A. V. Laub, Mrs. Arthur Booth, Mrs. A. P. Meyer and Mrs. Harry Ricketts. For program there will be some nature poems read by Mrs. J. M. Bowden. In case of rain the picnic will take place at the clubhouse.

Miss Helen Kramer Weds Edward Warner Seifert

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kramer announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Kramer, to Edward Warner Seifert, which took place Saturday, September 3, in Wildwood. Mr. and Mrs. Seifert will be at home in Allison Park.

Holy Rosary Club Plans Dance and Card Party

The Holy Rosary Social Club will celebrate its third anniversary with a card party and dance in the new hall Tuesday evening.

Women to Start Club Year at Duquesne

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Although it will not observe presidents day until September 24, the Duquesne Young Women's Club will have its opening tomorrow night at a get-together meeting. There will be a reception of new members and a one-act play and bridge for entertainment.

The president's tea will also be a joint event with the birthday celebration and again new members will be received into the organization. In October the girls will have another combination event, a publicity forum with the club editor of the Sun-Telegraph as speaker and a Heinz motion picture demonstration and supper.

No hint is given as to what the program will be on the "southern night" that comes later that month. Mrs. John M. Phillis, first vice president of the State Federation and a member of the Pittsburgh Board of Education, will speak on "Schools of Today," and Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, another prominent Pittsburgh clubwomen, will visit the organization in November. December brings a party and a play, January a juvenile night, a paid-up dues party, a talk by Mark Egan and a covered dish supper, all divided between the two meetings.

Dr. Harvey Salt is announced as a February speaker, a reciprocity night is one of March's events, an exhibition program arranged by the membership and scout committees, the mother and daughter banquet, the annual business meeting, a bridge and the annual picnic conclude the regular events, in addition to which there are numerous social affairs.

Mt. Lebanon Man And Dormont Girl Wed

Mrs. Mary A. Layden, of Kelton avenue, Dormont, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Geraldine Layden, to William J. Foy, of Vernon drive, Mt. Lebanon, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Foy, of Schenectady, N. Y., which was solemnized at a nuptial high mass Wednesday morning in St. Bernard's Church.

The bride wore powder blue chiffon and velvet with a matching hat and carried Johanna Hill roses showered with lilies of the valley. Miss Jean Layden, as her sister's maid of honor, wore peach lace with a matching hat, and carried garden flowers. James Francis Layden served as best man.

After the wedding breakfast in the Layden home, Mr. and Mrs. Foy left on a motor trip through the Adirondacks and Canada. And will visit the bridegroom's parents. After October 1 they will be at home in Brookline.

Daughters of America To Hold Card Party

Swissvale Daughters of America will hold a card party Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock in Dixon Hall, Edgewood avenue.

An interesting engagement comes from California, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hicks, of California, announce the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Mildred Hicks, to Richard J. Helmstadter, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Helmstadter, of McKeesport.

Miss Hicks attended Ohio Wesleyan and Radcliffe, and her fiance, Allegheny and the Harvard School of Business Administration.

Junior Hadassah Opens New Season on Monday

Junior Hadassah's year will begin with a meeting in the Y. M. and W. H. A. on Monday evening. The program will include solos by Mrs. Lucille Mille Werner, with Miss Sarah Rosenbloom accompanying, and readings by Mrs. Bessie Kann Sack.

Newlyweds Will Take Plane to Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, of Phoenix, Ariz., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Winifred Brown, to Breese M. Dickinson, Jr., son of Mrs. Breese M. Dickinson, of Stanton avenue, which took place yesterday in Phoenix.

Mrs. Dickinson and her daughter, Miss Clara Dickinson, attended the ceremony. Mr. Dickinson and his bride will live in Pittsburgh. They will travel here by airplane.

Reception to Teachers To Be Held in Avalon

A reception to the borough school teachers will be held Monday evening in conjunction with the meeting of the Avalon Woman's Club. Mrs. William M. Young is to present the year book; Mrs. R. J. Dunbar, president, will welcome the guests; Miss Sara Jamison Logan will sing and Miss Mary P. Lang will speak of "China—Old and New."

Miss Hilda Mary Brant Marries J. J. Hesidence

On July 14 in the chapel of the Holy Rosary Church, Miss Hilda Mary Brant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brant, of Race street, Homewood, became the bride of Joseph James Hesidence, of Glenshaw. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock that morning with the Rev. Thomas S. Riley officiating.

THE NEW EVENING NECKLINES STRIKE INDIVIDUALITY NOTE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Evening necklines, in Paris, top the list of fashions which individual women make for themselves. Although not every feminine idea on clothes is successful, there are certain little details about evening clothes which no professional designer can ever suggest; in fact the important Paris dressmakers advise their clients to use their own ingenuity in the way they arrange the flowers, the necklaces and other jewels on their evening clothes.

* * *

A CENSUS of any theater audience in the French capital will furnish anyone with a dozen or more new ideas about ways to disguise the appearance of a last-season gown. A new way of arranging gardenias at the back of one's frock, a trick about combining two colored necklaces into one, or a touch of jewelry on one's sandals—and a whole costume may be changed.

* * *

THE SKETCHES made by the Paris artist at a fashionable play opening show how many ways flowers—either real or artificial—may be worn on an evening dress. At the top, a single silk peonie placed high on one shoulder and a puff fashioned of the dress fabric worn on the upper arm on other side, give an assymetrical effect to an otherwise classic neckline.

* * *

NEXT IN order is an evening gown square-necked at the front and V-shaped at the back, adorned with four tiny white flowers of fine Irish crochet. In the lower left-hand corner and the upper right are two views of a pink faille dress, worn with a lei of the dress fabric. At the lower right is one of the new sandals, tied at the center front with a jeweled bar pin and worn without stockings.

League of Women Voters to Open New Season

The opening meeting of the Fourteenth Ward League of Women Voters will be held Monday afternoon in the Colonial School, Murray avenue, and the Rev. Dr. Frank Edwin Smith, guest speaker, will talk on "History Day by Day."

The Twenty-sixth Ward League will open on Tuesday in the American Legion Home, Perrysville avenue. "Party Platforms" will be the subject and speakers representatives of both political parties. Mrs. Adda Keyser will sing, with Miss Christine Cochrane at the piano.

The newly organized Avalon League will have a tea in the home of Mrs. Carl Behrhorst, Home avenue, on Wednesday, when Attorney Bessie Kann Sack will be the speaker, taking for her subject, "How to Be an Intelligent Juror." A reading by Mrs. Maurie H. Longmore and vocal selections by Miss Ella Scott will be other features of the afternoon's entertainment.

The Fourteenth Ward League of Women Voters will begin its fall activities by giving a benefit card party with Mrs. Reinhardt Thiessen as chairman and Mrs. F. O. Graham as vice chairman. The party is to be held at the Arlington Apartment Hotel, Center and Aiken avenues, on September 23. Mrs. Graham and Mrs. E. E. Pollock will have charge of prizes; Mrs. C. R. Fettke, Mrs. H. D. Stark and Mrs. W. A. Durell head the finance committee; Mrs. F. A. Bond, Mrs. J. Wood Clark, Miss Sarah McClelland and Mrs. J. G. Silveus are on the publicity committee; Mrs. D. I. Kirk and Mrs. A. C. Amsler will have charge of tables and Mrs. John Stahl and Mrs. J. McLaughlin of cards.

New England Conference To Meet October 18-20

The New England Conference of State Federations of Women's Clubs will be held at Mountain View House, Whitefield, New Hampshire, October 18, 19 and 20. Mrs. Edward H. Whitney, of Rhode Island, announces a galaxy of brilliant speakers, headed by Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation. The chief social function of the conference will be a testimonial dinner to honor Mrs. Poole.

One session will be devoted to outstanding achievements of the six state federations of New England. Another feature will be a model club institute.

HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS FOR GUM USERS

Inquiring Reporters Start Handing Out Crisp New Bills

By MR. SPEAR

Promptly at eight-thirty, armed with a fresh supply of crisp dollar bills, I started down Liberty Avenue. Miss Mint and I and our assistants each took a different section of the downtown district today.

One of the first persons I approached — ALLAN GOLDSTEIN, 2702 Tilbury Street— pulled out a package of Juicy Fruit in answer to my question: "Have you a package of Wrigley's Gum? He was greatly surprised at his good fortune, and said it looked as though his luck was turning when I gave him a dollar bill.

A little further down the street, after talking with several people waiting for stop lights and street cars, I stopped RICHARD LAKE, 1602 East Street, who promptly pulled out a package of Double Mint. He said "After reading about this interesting plan of rewarding Wrigley Gum chewers, I decided to be prepared and bought a package of Double Mint the first thing this morning." He got his dollar.

MRS. G. L. RUSSELL, of 2860 Middletown Road, hustling along Liberty Avenue on a shopping expedition, reached right into her handbag and pulled out an open package of Spearmint. She said "It makes my shopping trips so pleasant when I chew Spearmint; it keeps my mouth moist and relieves the tenseness of crossing streets and jostling crowds." Of course, she was pleased with the dollar I gave her.

One of the most surprised persons I approached was MRS. J. T. THOMPSON, 708 Ardmore Boulevard. Spearmint is Mrs. Thompson's favorite flavor. "The new cellophane wrapper," she remarked, "seems to keep the flavor much longer."

WILMA A. REILAND, 9 Butler Street, Millvale, promptly produced a package of Juicy Fruit, claimed her dollar reward and said, "I find Wrigley's especially refreshing after meals and between smokes."

Then I moved over to the Boulevard of the Allies where that genial officer of the law— MICHAEL O'MALLEY, 3102 Terrace Street—holds out at Wood Street. Mr. O'Malley was all set for me; without any hesitation, he pulled a package of Double Mint out of his pocket and said, "Wrigley's is a great help to me directing traffic in the heat, dust and confusion of this corner. I never have a dry mouth when I chew Wrigley's."

I really felt sorry for one lady— CLARA OLSON is her name—I approached late Friday afternoon. She told me she was a regular user of Wrigley's Gum, but she just didn't have a package with her at the moment. "But I won't be caught without it again," she said.

Another disappointed person was WM. C. KREILING, an accountant, 2224 Wilson Avenue, who was walking down Wood Street with his brother when I stopped him. "I gave my Spearmint to the children at home this morning," he said, "otherwise I'd have that dollar bill: I defy you to catch me without Wrigley's again."

Most of the disappointed ones dashed right off to a gum counter thinking that Miss Mint or I or our assistants might approach them again.

I haven't room to list the names of all the people I gave dollar bills to on Friday, but here are a few: THOMAS G. DAVIS, 401 Plaza Bldg.; MISS TERESA M. MEYER, 20 Furley St.; F. H. APPENROOT, 100 Catskill Ave., Brentwood; H. W. PHARO, 600 North Ave., Wilkinsburg; KENNETH DUNN, 554 Rosswood Ave., McKees Rocks; J. R. MANE, 2080 Walton Ave.; W. R. HOEL, 214 S. Atlantic Ave.; NORMAN GOLDSTEIN, 2705 Penn Ave.; HERBERT MALLORY, 3133 Frederick St., N. S., Pittsburgh; MRS. R. G. PUHL, Corliss P. O.; R. L. HACKETT, 615 North Ave., Wilkinsburg; A. C. COMBS, 2827 Webster Ave.; JOE LEEBOVITZ, 58 Roberts St.; and ROBERT A. VANCE, 129 Altmeyer St., Sharpsburg.

Everybody had better be prepared because we're calling on hundreds of people every day; on the street, in offices, factories and even homes. We'll be all over town every day—you can never tell when you will be stopped. There are no exceptions—we stop the young and old—men, women and children—everybody is eligible. All you have to do is just have one of the four popular Wrigley flavors when I stop you and ask "Have you a package of Wrigley's?" Then tell me how you like it and take your dollar.

READ POLITICAL MEANING INTO MARKET

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Attempts are being made to read political meaning into the recent ticks of the stock ticker.

President Hoover's acceptance speech was an attempt to take credit for the rallying forces under way.

Mr. Rukeyser

And yet the fact that prices have risen sharply from calamitiously low levels is scarcely evidence of triumph on the part of management in the large.

The opposition might well attack the "ins" for permitting things to drop so low.

As for myself, I have always felt that the shifts of control of the federal government from the Republican to the Democratic parties and vice versa constitute a minor influence on the economic cycle. The election ought to be decided on other issues than whether the pre-election economic narcotics can hold their effect until the time for balloting.

It is a perpetuation of primitive economic anarchy to achieve the dynamic force for a rally by permitting production and distribution to fall to distinctly subnormal levels, thus creating shortages. In a rational, planned economy, emphasis would be placed on stability, rather than on feverish recoveries after panicky collapses.

As the late Paul M. Warburg said with infinite astuteness, the way to avoid a severe depression is to "sit on the bulge."

The president of one great barometric corporation, whose orders immediately reflect a general pickup in industry, said he sees no signs yet of fundamental general improvement. On the other hand, he thinks that the comeback in security prices has been justified, because he feels that it brought securities from a level at which they were undervalued to one where they are more correctly valued on the basis of investment worth.

Elmer W. Stout, president, the Fletcher American National Bank, Indianapolis, in a message to this column, says:

"There is a better feeling in this section of the country, although so far no tangible results of business improvement. It is my opinion that there is no scarcity of legitimate credit. I can think of no additional governmental regulation which might assist. Banks out here are taking commercial loans of good quality as usual.

GERMAN AUTO OUTPUT CUT

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—A sharp decline in production and sale of motor cars in Germany took place in the first half of 1932. The greatest decrease is shown in medium and large cars.

Decreases from the preceding year in production of various kinds of motors in the first six months of 1932 follow: Baby cars and small cars, 28 per cent; medium and large cars, 75 per cent; trucks, 55 per cent; small tax-free motorcycles, 5 per cent; other motorcycles, 50 per cent.

Baby car production is handled practically exclusively by Opel, D. K. W., Hanomag and B. M. W., while Opel, Wanderer and Adler manufacture most of the small cars. N. S. U. and D. K. W. are the principal makers of the tax-free type of motorcycles. All other car manufacturers have suffered severely.

Not only decreased buying power, but increased competition from the sale of used cars, is responsible for the present depression in the industry.

A drastic decrease was recorded in the sale and importation of foreign cars. Some of the foreign companies with assembling plants in Germany also have been badly affected. During the first half of 1932 only 539 foreign cars were imported, against 1,827 in the same period of 1931.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Clearings this week show further improvement in bank settlements. The total at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, was $3,910,088,000, a reduction of 18.1 per cent from last year. New Bond Offerings Higher for Week

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—New bond issues formally offered this week aggregated $10,852,323 comparing with only $2,500,000 last week and $75,356,000 in the like 1931 period.

STEEL TRADE CONDITIONS IMPROVE

By B. E. V. LUTY

Conditions in the steel trade improved this week, making the first distinct improvement since that of the first two months of the year. The improvement is small but is plainly marked, being visible in the majority of steel making districts.

While at no time was there more than a small improvement predicted for the present date, a little feeling of disappointment in the industry is observable. Apparently steel producers hoped for more improvement than they ventured to predict.

INGOT OUTPUT UP

Steel ingot production this week has been at fully 15 per cent of capacity, against no more than about 14 per cent in the two preceding weeks. The official report of ingot production in August shows an average for the month of 14.26 per cent, against 14.66 per cent in July, and thus August becomes the low month of the period. There was a slight downward trend during August. Commonly August has shown a slight increase over the July rate.

Production in the last three months has averaged a shade over 10,000,000 tons a year. Not since 1900 has there been a three-month rate so low. In view of the fact that several hundred millions, probably more than half a billion, tons of steel is in service it is held that ordinary upkeep or provision for wear and tear has not been taken care of, arrearages accumulating which must be covered some time, the only question being when.

Further improvement is fully expected along two lines. Purely seasonal increase in tonnage would culminate in October or possibly as late as November, being followed by a slipping towards the year-end. General improvement, due to better business and financial conditions, would be continuous, with no December lull, as was the case in 1922 and 1924.

GRADUAL UPTURN SEEN

The smallness of the increase in mill operations to date indicates that there was little basis for some rumors circulated that large orders were placed in August for execution promptly after the end of the month. There has been simply a widespread small increase, which is expected to be continuous. The more sanguine guesses are that the peak rate of ingot production in the remainder of the year will approach 25 per cent. An increase of exactly one-half over the average rate of the last three months would make 22½ per cent.

There has been a further increase in jobber buying of steel products, more noticeable in sheets than in other lines. Shipments of steel to the automobile trade have risen from almost nothing to a small volume, and further increase is dependent upon the public becoming more willing to buy cars. In this connection Detroit is watching the tape.

The scrap market has shown no further consumer buying of importance, but has grown still stronger. It is clear that the strengthening, which moved heavy melting steel up $1.50 in a few weeks and hydraulic compressed still more, came from the bottom, by scrap offerings becoming extremely limited, not from the top by consumer demand greatly increasing. Thus there is little in the theory that the marked rise in scrap directly foreshadows large increase in steel production.

GROUP OFFERS WHARF PLAN

Plans to improve the Allegheny River wharf, between Ninth and Stanwix streets, by private interests, who would turn it back to the city after 15 years, were sent to City Council late yesterday by a group headed by George Vang, contractor, and head of large sand and gravel companies. The work would cost $1,000,000, of which, according to the specifications, $550,000 would be borne by the city.

Vang said he represented persons whose identity would not be disclosed now. Council President John S. Herron said the proposal would be introduced in Council Monday.

Preliminary plans forwarded City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt by Norman F. Brown, consulting engineer, include arrangements for automobile parking, storage and navigation activities. Brown said:

"The plans are subject to approval by the city and the War Department. I feel that they will be beneficial to Pittsburgh and its taxpayers."

Leather Prices Again Advanced

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—United States Leather Company and other sole leather tanners again advanced prices of leather a full cent a pound all around.

The rise in sole leather prices now amounts to 3 cents a pound from the bottom, or about 15 per cent.

SHORT WORKING WEEK GAINS FAVOR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Shorter working days and shorter working weeks appear to be headed for a definite place in the industrial sun.

Such a plan is being increasingly advocated by financial, industrial and economic leaders, in addition to having the approbation of federal officials. The administration, however, has announced opposition to attempts to accomplish this through national legislation.

THOUGHT STABILIZER

A five-day week, particularly, is being advocated as a practical stabilizer to diffuse purchasing power and create a consumers' market not only for commodity surpluses but for services as well.

Sponsors of the plan declare the present age is one of mechanization and of simplification, requiring shorter hours in which the output is greater than ever before. In this connection it is pointed out that wages and salaries in the cost of converting raw materials into finished products have been curtailed about 20 per cent in the last 10 years through the greater use of machinery.

Advocates of the five-day week say that if workers be paid on the basis of a six-day week, while working only five, it would restore more than three-fourths of the 20 per cent loss.

COMPROMISE SEEN

As the matter now stands, labor organizations are heartily in favor of the five-day week with six days' pay while industry generally is holding out for a five-day week with five days' pay. Washington, however, believes that from these conflicting views there will eventually emerge a compromise plan built around shorter hours which may prove nationally popular.

Some dissenting voices to such an argument have been heard here from time to time, built mainly around the theory that shorter hours will not relieve unemployment—it will simply scatter it.

Reliable authorities declare the number of workers already on a five-day week represent now about 5 per cent of the total.

INDUSTRY HIRES MORE WORKERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—The California beet sugar industry is employing 25 per cent more workers this year than it employed last year, the United States Beet Sugar Association announced.

More than 7,000 workers now are engaged in harvesting and refining the Galifornia crop, it was declared. The six factories within the state estimate they will refine more than 4,000,000 bags of 100 pounds each.

This year's crop, the largest and best in the state's history, will involve the distribution of $14,000,000, of which two-thirds will go to beet farmers, 10 per cent to factory and office workers, 10 per cent to the railroads for freight and 14 per cent for supplies and equipment.

Market Has Absorbed Heavy Selling for Profit Taking

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—There was a lot more stock for sale yesterday, and the market was unable to make any headway against the burden, though it tried very hard several times.

Support was again in evidence, and net losses were not large. Profit-taking in the last two days must have represented several million shares; yet few leaders showed losses of as much as 5 points, which is a favorable sign.

The market is still in a test zone, however, and must turn more convincingly than it has tried since Thursday to restore confidence in the present price level.

Two important factors loom large today. One is wheat. Yesterday's crop report was somewhat favorable. The other is the United States Steel unfilled tonnage report at noon.

Wall street has been at odds on what the Steel report would show, with many still inclined to look for a small decline.

New Revenue Act Aids Treasury Condition

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Improvement in the condition of the Treasury over the same period of the last fiscal year was shown yesterday, despite continued declines in custom receipts and income tax returns.

Bolstered by the new revenue act, miscellaneous revenue along with some curtailment in expenditures is largely responsible for the bettered condition shown in the Treasury's latest condition statement.

This statement showed miscellaneous receipts for September 6, which included the Labor Day week-end, at $8,314,961, bringing the total receipts from this source to $21,104,679 for the first six days of September compared with $8,400,576 for the corresponding six days last year.

Telephone Losses Checked in August

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—August brought a marked slackening in the losses of telephone subscribers in the Bell System, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company announced today.

Telephone disconnections in August numbered 201,000, as reduced from 268,000 in July, which provided the first sign of a subsiding of the movement in several months.

Railroad Asks O. K. On Issue of Bonds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—The Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad has asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue and deliver to the Pennsylvania Railroad $471,800 of general and refunding 5 per cent gold bonds. The issue will be guaranteed by the Pennsylvania.

Pole Will Head Wheeling Concern

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Officials of the Fidelity Investment Association of Wheeling have announced that John W. Pole, whose resignation as Comptroller of the Currency was accepted yesterday by President Hoover, will become president of the concern. Fidelity Investment is a $30,000,000 organization.

Plant to Resume After Long Idleness

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Ritter Dental Manufacturing Company will resume operations October 1 after having been idle since March 1. About 500 will be employed.

Underwood Sales Soar 32 Pct. In August

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Underwood Elliott Fisher Company orders received for August showed a 32 per cent increase over July. This includes both foreign and domestic business.

The showing represented a sharp contrast between the August, 1932, business and that of August, 1931, when orders dropped 17 per cent below those for July of that year.

PRODUCERS SEE REVIVAL FOR COPPER

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—A slow but sure recuperation of the copper industry, based entirely on supply and demand and without any further attempts at co-operative curtailment, is now expected by leading American producers.

Although the world's copper stocks continue at a high mark, and any real demand has not yet appeared, it is pointed out that the metal recently has displayed a firm, if not buoyant, tendency.

HIGHER PRICE SEEN

In June, copper sank to an all-time low price of 5 cents a pound. Then, in the open market, the price began to creep up until today it is hovering around 6.25 cents a pound, while the rate in the domestic field has advanced to 6.25 cents. Some dealers predict a price of 7 cents a pound soon.

The upward swing, starting abroad, was attributed principally to the fact that foreign fabricators had permitted their stocks to drop so low they had to replenish them.

PROFITS WIPED OUT

With the industry going from bad to worse, further efforts at international curtailment of output were begun last spring. Then the American tariff of 4 cents a pound was inaugurated and most foreign producers withdrew from Copper Exporters, Inc., the industry's co-operative sales agency. Consequently, most of the world's large copper corporations now operate on their own. But low prices, it is said, have brought individual curtailment of production.

Present prices of around 6¼ cents a pound contrast with an average domestic selling rate of 8.24 cents a pound in 1931, 13.11 in 1930, and 18.23 in 1929. Even at the present price there are few producers able to make a profit. But the more optimistic metal experts foresee a slowly growing consumption as other industries climb back to normal.

GENERAL TRADE GAINS HERE

A slight improvement in general business conditions is noted in this district, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Sales of seasonal merchandise show more activity and this condition particularly applies to drygoods, men's, women's and children's wearing apparel, as well as shoes.

The rising commodity prices have to some extent stimulated placing of orders for future delivery, and optimism is more prevalent than has been the case for a period of considerable time. The demand for groceries and provisions is at a higher rate, with prices also showing a slight improvement. Building operations continue light, and the demand for lumber and other building materials is still slow.

Some increase is reported in the demand for sanitary and heating equipment, although these lines are being held down to a low rate, owing to the lack of building construction. Thus far, there has been but little change in the average rate of production of electrical equipment.

Although collections continue to average much below normal, there has been a slight improvement in some lines.

Pierce-Arrow Sales Show 60% Upturn

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—A 60 per cent increase in retail deliveries of Pierce-Arrow automobiles during August as compared with July sales was reported by Arthur J. Chanter, first vice president and general manager of Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company.

Chanter also declared the incrased sales should be reflected in an increase in employment in the company's plant here.

QUIET UPTURN DEVELOPS IN MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—A quiet recovery developed in the stock market in the early trading today, after a mixed opening.

Traders were somewhat hesitant, in advance of publication of United States Steel's tonnage after the close of trading. Gains of 1 to 1½ points appeared during the first half hour in United States Steel, Bethlehem, Coca Cola, Case, International Harvester, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Baltimore and Ohio. Early recessions of 2 in Macy and 1¼ in Kennecott were about recovered.

The tenor of week-end trade advices was again mildly encouraging, but the inability of the market to resume its advance in the previous session made some traders wonder if the favorable factors had not been discounted, for the moment at least. Some, however, felt that the market's technical position was being strengthened by a rebuilding of the short position.

Commodities were watched closely for clues as to the trend of stocks. The government's estimate of the wheat crop, showing a slight decline, was about as expected. Most market observers felt that cotton had encountered fair buying after its setback, but that its trend would now depend upon news from the textile industry.

Sterling cables opened at $3.49⅛, up ⅛.

USED VEHICLE FINANCING UP

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The number of used automobiles sold on the installment plan, in proportion to the volume of new cars similarly financed, has reached the highest figure in history during 1932.

Reports to the National Association of Finance Companies from approximately 400 such concerns indicate that 172 used cars were financed during the first six months of this year for every 100 new cars bought on the installment plan.

For 1931 the ratio was only 138 used cars for every 100 new cars, and for 1930 it was 121 used cars for every 100 new vehicles sold through finance companies.

COTTON EASES SLIGHTLY

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 4 higher on steadier Liverpool cables which, however, were offset partly by favorable weather. October, 8:07; December, 8.24; January, 8:30; March, 8:42; May, 8.57; July, 8.67.

Prices held fairly steady during the first few minutes, but eased slightly with December working off from 8.27 to 8.16. The general list was about 3 to 5 points net lower.

Rumors of bullish cloth statistics following the large business reported in the domestic goods last month were circulating, but had little apparent effect on the immediate market.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 10. — Cotton—Receipts, 1,000 bales, including 300 American; spot moderate business done; prices 6 points higher; (quotations in pence): American strict good middling, 5.99; good middling, 6.74; strict middling, 6.54; middling, 6.44; strict low middling, 6.34; low middling, 6.24; strict good ordinary, 6.04; good ordinary, 5.74. N. Y. Exchange Asks Crex Carpet Data

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The New York Stock Exchange today sent a questionnaire to all members, seeking information on dealings in the capital stock of the Crex Carpet Company, which was recently suspended from trading privileges.

The stock was removed from trading after a series of sharp movements in its price which gave rise to rumors that a technical corner had developed.

Power Output Reflects Higher Textile Mill Operations

An analysis of the electric power output figures for the week ended September 3 shows they reflect higher operations in the textile districts. Increased demand for energy came from the Carolinas, Georgia, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. The improvement in cotton and textiles has penetrated to steel mills in the Birmingham district, where demands for sheets for roofing and wire fence materials have developed a fairly upward trend since late in August.

While speculative activities have been conducted in Republic Steel common recently, a better class of buying has been in the preferred issue which is selling below 30. There are accumulations on this issue which must be paid off before the common can be considered in line for dividends. Thus far there has been only a slight improvement in Republic Steel's business.

If business is at the turn, as some believe, and on the way to an extended recovery, it would appear that more than at any time in the past there is a need for discrimination in buying equities. Yesterday's "blue chips" may not be the leaders in the next few years. During the past few years many companies were more successful than others in getting their affairs in shape for a better demand.

"It will be interesting to see what effect the rise in stocks has had upon the shareholders' lists of large corporations when these figures are next made public. For the past three years the number of stockholders has been growing. It has been the experience in United States Steel common that some of the smaller investors sold on the first extended advances which followed past major bear markets. At such times the large investors who buy in large quantities have added to their holdings, and the number of smaller stockholders has decreased.

While the snuff companies are having to contend with reduced consumption of their product, July showing an especially drastic drop, the reduced costs of tobacco and other materials entering into the manufacture and sale of snuff were sufficient to offset the lower output in the first half year. George W. Helme and United States Tobacco, two of the country's three leading snuff makers, have large security holdings, the income from which has tended to stabilize earnings regardless of consumption fluctuations.

Money markets are different these days. Last week the out of town banks withdrew from New York banks close to $50,000,000 to meet calls for more money over Labor Day and the transfer caused no apparent result in the money market. The New York banks "took it in their stride," as one banker explained. They still had $142,000,000 excess reserves left at the reserve bank. Back in 1929 a big shift of funds like that would have caused more than a ripple in the local market and probably would have lifted the lending rate for money on call. The margin between the volume of credit and the demand was a lot narrower then, for the stock market was booming and business going at a faster clip.

Bureau Meeting Hits Security Buying On Margin

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

BETTER BUSINESS Bureaus of the country have declared war on margin buying of securities according to dispatches from Columbus, O., where those organizations are holding their eighteenth annual convention.

These bureaus, in most of their efforts, have been doing a good job in eliminating fraudulent practices from finance and industry. But their latest stand on margin buying of securities may be subjected to question.

H. J. Kenner, of New York, dean of the nation's Better Business Bureau executives, who launched the attack on margin purchases, has been quoted as saying:

> "Securities and other property bought for income should be purchased outright by the average man, and only after thorough investigations of earnings, assets, value and management of a company in which the investment is to be made."

* * *

Investigation Need Is Staunchly Upheld

NO ONE CAN take exception to Mr. Kenner's recommendation on the importance of a thorough investigation of a security before it is purchased. That is merely good business sense. No one can deny that the purchase of securities on a thin margin is a dangerous practice. But this does not constitute the entire case against the purchase of stocks on margin.

The buying of securities on margin is nothing more nor less than the use of credit for a business transaction. In principal it does not differ from the use of credit to facilitate any other well known type of purchase. It merely happens to have been brought to public attention in an exceptionally vivid form through the fact that the extreme liquidity of listed stocks and bonds makes it possible to secure credit for their purchase in an exceptionally large proportion to the total investment and with extreme ease.

* * *

Parallels Found In Other Fields

WHEN AN INDIVIDUAL buys a house and has a mortgage outstanding against it, he is, to all practical intents, buying that house on margin. When a manufacturer does not have enough cash to carry on his business and borrows from a bank, he is doing his business on margin. Fundamentally there is little difference between such use of credit and the buying of stocks and bonds on margin when a portion of the purchase price is owed to a bank or a broker. In all cases credit is used to make it possible for an individual or an organization to carry on business on a larger scale than immediate cash resources permit. It is admitted that it is safer to do business without resorting to borrowing but the use of credit increases the chance for profit just as it increases the risk. The use of credit in this this way is nearly as old as commerce itself.

It is dangerous for an inexperienced person to open a store or to engage in manufacturing and to extend his credit to the limit. Such a practice should be discouraged by educating individuals to understand the pitfalls, but we cannot condemn the use of all credit by business just because some persons make mistakes.

It is equally as illogical to make a general condemnation of the use of credit for the purchase of securities just because some individuals take exceptional risks and make mistakes.

CITRUS OUTLOOK GOOD

Nathan Mayo, Florida commissioner of agriculture, states that the outlook for the citrus crop the coming season indicates a better quality and size of fruit. Within a few weeks the crop will begin to move. There will be a slightly smaller crop than last year. Rigid inspection and enforcement of the green fruit law, which prohibits movement of immature products, or arsenated fruit will have the effect of improving the quality of the shipments. The State Marketing Bureau's latest condition report on the crop says it will be about 7 per cent less than that of last year. The bureau estimates last year's citrus crop at approximately 115,000 carloads valued at more than $68,000,000.

SUN LIFE ASSETS

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as of June 30 reported to the insurance department of the State of Georgia that the total amount of insurance outstanding was $3,045,084,654, which compared with $3,021,035,990 as of December 31, 1931. Admitted assets of $609,692,400, as of June 30, compared with $622,597,718 December 31. Convention values were employed to determine assets. Surplus figures are not yet available.

WALGREEN TO EXPAND

Walgreen Company probably will resume expansion on a moderate scale shortly, provided a sufficient number of leases can be obtained at moderate rentals. The company's conservative expansion policy throughout the depression has enabled it to effect constant improvement in its balance sheet position. Through use of its depreciation reserve alone it could open quite a few stores in the course of a year. The company is operating well in the black and has shown a profit each month throughout the depression.

CUBAN SUGAR EXPORTS

Exports of Cuban raw sugar to the United States from January 1 to August 27 totaled 1,220,857 long tons. This compares with 1,455,888 long tons in the corresponding period of last year. Exports to countries other than the United States amounted to 678,207 long tons, against 428,539 tons in the like period of last year.

DOME'S AUGUST OUTPUT

Value of production of Dome Mines, Inc., in August amounted to $317,788 as compared with $302,719 in the corresponding month of 1931. For the eight months ended with August output was valued at $2,736,822, as compared with $2,358,339 in the similar period a year ago.

STOCKS WEAK ON MARKET HERE

Stocks on the Pittsburgh Exchange continued to display the weak tone apparent in yesterday's trading. The principal local issues opened fractionally lower than on Friday's closing transactions and lost a further amount of ground later this morning.

Weakness on the market here has been a direct reflection of the uncertain tone of the New York Exchange during the past three days. Traders generally regard the reaction as a natural consequence of the almost uninterrupted period of advance which was under way for two months. They declare that the surprising feature is not that the reaction is taking place but that it is so slight in comparison to the sharp upsurge of stocks from their low levels in July.

Volume of trading on the local exchange has been sharply reduced, which indicates that there is no heavy selling pressure.

U. S. CORN CROP ESTIMATE UP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—Based on a condition of 74.4 per cent of normal on September 1, the crop reporting board yesterday estimated the United States corn crop this year would be 2,854,307,000 bushels as compared with 2,563,000,000 bushels last year.

The total wheat crop will amount to 714,538,000 bushels, divided as follows: Winter wheat, 442,000,000 bushels; all spring wheat, 272,750,000 bushels; durum wheat (four states), 44,779,000 bushels; other spring wheat, 227,971,000 bushels.

The condition of the oat crop was 75.4 per cent of normal, indicating a production of 1,244,781,000 bushels.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 21,754

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Loading of revenue freight during the week ended September 3 totaled 559,727 cars, an increase of 21,754 cars over the previous week, but 200,144 cars under the like 1931 week, according to the American Railway Association.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

To Constance

My dear Miss Bennett: Very often when
I see you representing one of those Poor silly creatures, much betrayed by men,
You pose.

And when you obviously are not true,
You surely try the patience of a Job;
But never disappoint the patrons—you
Disrobe.

When you have been deserted once again
And all good honest people are asleep;
Returning to your swell apartment, then
You weep.

Sometime why not display a little tact
And act?

—Van H. Eshelman.

Oop!

One of the quips that George M. Cohan relates on himself deals with the days when he was a novice. He tells how he sold himself to E. F. Albee, the head of the Keith Circuit, by masquerading as a "trick violinist," and left it to Albee to fix his wage.

After his first engagement Cohan was irked to find only $6 in his pay envelope.

"Can you beat that?" Cohan groaned to a fellow player. "Albee said he'd give me what I was worth and paid me $6."

"Really," was the indifferent retort, "what's the extra dollar for?"

In Fewer Words

One of the better squelches was recorded on the West Coast recently by Al Jolson, who was being heckled by a member of the audience.

Holding his thumb and index finger to his nose the heckler yelled:

"Peeyew!"

"And you," screamed Jolson, "are a complete blueprint for a moron!"

Was My Face Vermilion

They were arguing about first-nighters, particularly the critics, who boast that they never dress for a permiere.

"You forget," said a reviewer, "that we go to the first-nights professionally—not socially."

"That's no reason," stifled a listener, "for you fellers to dirty up a theater!"

Fair Enough

The demands for help from this and that stranger finally got on the nerves of one lad the other day. The stranger said:

"We have a new charity and we've got you down for $100—will you give it?"

"Here's one-fourth of it," said the benefactor, whose name is now on all such lists, "that makes you lose 75 and I only lose 25."

Novelette

The chatter switched to Charles B. Dillingham and his grand career as a Broadway showman until the recent sour breaks came. One of the group recalled this fact. Dillingham's ex-wife was terribly social. She refrained from mixing with the Broadway crowd and was so uppity she rarely went to see her husband's first-nights, which always enticed fashionable crowds.

One day he evened matters. His wife threw a dinner for her social friends. Dillingham was told to engage butlers and waiters. He hired a troupe of jugglers, frocked them in butler apparel, and when the socially registered sat down to dine, the waiters and butlers removed their plates and juggled them all over the dining room.

The Dillinghams were divorced a month later.

Obviously

They were discussing the late Wilton Lackaye again the other day. Irving Hoffman recalled that someone once asked Lackaye whom he considered to be a really finished actor.

"A dead one!" was the reply.

By All Means!

A warning to motorists on the No. 9 route leading into Albany, N. Y., ought to be copied by Chambers of Commerce the world over. It states:

"Lose a minute and save a Life!"

The Reason Perfect

Sam Rosoff, the subway builder and sportsman, was having a difficult time of it entertaining his friends at Saratoga one sundown because his butler resigned at the last moment. Sam asked him why he was leaving so suddenly.

"Well," was the reply, "that friend of yours who is staying here with you asked me to bet a dollar on a horse for him. And if I remained here to buttle for a guy who bets a dollar on a horse that would make me lower than him—so I quit!"

Horse Sense

Perhaps no other local knows more racetrack slang than Bill Farnsworth, the sports editor. He obliges with these: "Only the feed man beats the races" (meaning the bozo who sells hay, oats, etc., and winds up a winner) . . . "Sane men check their brains at the gate when they go to the races" . . . A half-mile track or a country fair track is a "merry-go-round" . . . In the very cheap races when they "dope the nags" the race is called: "The Drug Store Handicap" . . . A "boat race" is one where the jockeys "shoo in" the horse they are betting on . . . "A yank" and "a pull" is when the jockey doesn't want to win with his mount, and the ace of the nick-names for a racetrack is "An open-air insane asylum."

'King' to Play In Films

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 10.

A motion picture commission will take Faustin Wirkus, ex-United States Marine, back to the island where he ruled for six years as the white king of a black race.

Mr. Wirkus, whose extraordinary and authentic adventure was related in his book, "Voodoo," has been put under contract by Sol Lesser, head of Principal Pictures. This Hollywood company owns the book and is now making a talkie version of it.

Like fiction reads the experience of Wirkus in the Island of Lagonave, near Haiti. One day he landed there in a plane, under military instructions to maintain order in the island.

His reception was amazing. For a long time, there had been a native legend that their next king would come down out of the sky. Add to this the coincidence that their last king also had been named Faustin, and you have the elements of the drama that followed.

Faustin was discovered by William Seabrook, the writer, who celebrated the adventure in a book, "The Magic Isle." Later, upon securing his release from the Marine Corps, Faustin wrote his own story, "Voodoo."

By a rearrangement of the schedule on "Red Dust," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be able to shoot around Jean Harlow for at least 10 days. If she isn't able to return to work in that time, the picture, presumably, will come to a standstill. . . . Lew Cody and Buster Keaton are convulsing the natives by putting on Admirals' full dress uniforms when they descene from Buster's land yacht on their tour of Northern California . . . . Great rejoicing by the dusky Farina over his part in Joe E. Brown's picture, "You Said a Mouthful." For all these years, Farina—in reality Allen Hoskins—has been playing a girl on the screen. Eleven years old now, he had begun to rebel at his long hair. Then came the Warner offer to assume his manly estate. It meant the sacrifice of his hair. His mother cried. Farina grinned. Off went the hair. . . . Groucho Marx, Jimmie Gleason and a group of congenial associates have formed a club to meet one night a week in Hollywood. They call it, with Marxian irrelevance, "The Baltimore Lunch." The purpose of the club is conversation and conviviality. So far, there have been plenty of both.

Cortez to Work in Beery Vehicle

Ricardo Cortez will have a leading role in "Flesh," Wallace Beery's next starring picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The new film will be directed by John Ford, who made "Arrowsmith." Cortez has been seen recently in "Is My Face Red?" and "Symphony of Six Million."

Royal Infant In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The great gathering of European royalty at the ceremony attending the christening of the infant son of the former Princess Ileana of Roumania, is pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. Ex-King Alfonso of Spain came out of his exile to be godfather and is the star performer. The infant was born to Ileana and the Archduke Anton of Hapsburg and the christening took place at Moedling, near Vienna. Preceding the christening the royal procession wends its way through the estate of Archduke Anton, led by the baby's parents, Dowager Queen Marie of Roumania, Alfonse, Princess Elizabeth, sister of Ileana, and former queen of Greece, and others. The former King of Spain holds the infant in his arms and shows that he knows how to handle babies. He quiets it and announces that its name is Prince Stefan of Hapsburg. There are charming talks between Queen Marie and Anton, and by Ileana, who kisses the little prince and calls him "my beautiful baby."

FIGHTERS TRAIN

Latest pictures from the camps of Max Schmeling and Mickey Walker show them training hard for their coming battle in the New York Garden Bowl. First Schmeling is shown at Speculator, N. Y., in fast and furious bouts with his sparring partners. Then at Summitt, N. Y., Mickey is seen doing farm work and otherwise getting into condition.

Pictures from England show the unearthing of a recently discovered house in the buried city of Verulamium which was built by the Romans during the Conquest 1,800 years ago. The floors of this ancient dwelling contain beautiful mosaic decorations, and the novel heating system is shown practically intact. From the bottom of a driedup well rare pieces of pottery have been recovered.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

From Feinberg to Fitzroy

MR. FEINBERG was in love. Badly, madly, sadly in love. In his condition, garlic smelled like lilacs and his seat on the Bronx subway was as comfortable as the roomiest Rolls Royce. He fell asleep at nights with Mildred's name on his lips and he awakened in the morning with the girl on his mind. In other words, he was a first-class study for a popular son—or a psychopathic ward.

His marriage was only three weeks away. He was counting the hours, the days and the bankroll. Surely he was the luckiest man alive. He had a dress business that hadn't failed as yet. His insurance was in fine shape. His father and mother approved of Mildred. He was healthy, and only 27 years of age. And above all, he had Mildred.

Ah, that girl! To Mr. Feinberg she was the very essence of perfection. She was a Peggy Joyce, a Clara Bow, a Janet Gaynor all rolled into one. She was his honey lamb, his favorite flower and his most gorgeous statue.

I hate to spoil the picture, but were you and I to look at Mildred in those days, we might not be as enthused as Mr. Feinberg. In the first place, the young lady's eyes could grow very cold. And in the second place, she talked back too often. Accordingly, brothers, let me give you a tip: When you're in love with a girl whose eyes grow cold and who talks back too frequently, that's no time for romance.

But Mr. Feinberg did not ask for my advice. Furthermore, as usual, it would have done no good. For when Mildred's eyes grew cold, Mr. Feinberg thought they were more beautiful than ever. And when she talked back, he was proud of her spirit. And so, alas, they were married . . .

For a year or so everything was peaches and milk. Mr. Feinberg was getting along as nicely as you might expect and he hadn't failed in the dress business. And he was devoted to Mrs. Feinberg in spite of her nagging.

Yes, my friends, even Mr. Feinberg had begun to admit that she was something of a nag. Never content to let well enough alone, you know. If his business earned a profit of $300 in one week, she wanted to know why it hadn't earned $400. If he smoked cigars, she asked him not to smoke at all.

One night, out of a cloudy sky—just to be different—the blow fell. Mrs. Feinberg put down her coffee and looked at her husband.

"What you are going to do," she said, "is to change your name."

Her husband almost choked on a piece of strudel.

"Wha-wha-what?" he stammered. "What did you say?"

"I said," repeated Mrs. Feinberg calmly, "that you are going to change your name. I've been thinking about this for some time and I made up my mind this afternoon. I'll pick out some fine American name and you'll have the proper papers drawn up by your lawyer. I think that Forrester would be nice. Or maybe Fitzroy.

Mr. Feinberg was looking at her with wide eyes.

"Have you suddenly gone crazy?" he asked. "Do you want me to call Dr. Himmelstein? Or is it possible that you are serious?"

"Certainly I'm serious," she returned angrily. "Do you think I'm speaking just to hear myself talk? With such a name as Feinberg we can't possibly get anywhere in the social world. And I'm not so sure that it's helping you in the business world either. That's why we're no longer going to be known as Mr. and Mrs. Feinberg."

The man stood up. Get ready to cheer this speech, boys. For the first time in his married life, it was Mr. Feinberg's turn for the eyes to grow cold and the voice to bark back.

"Get this straight, Mildred," he roared. "The name of Feinberg was good enough for my family for countless generations, and it's good enough for me today. To the devil with the social world. If I'm not good enough for them as a Feinberg, I'm not good enough for them as Fitzroy either.

"I'm satisfied the way I am. And you're no longer going to tell me what I can or can't do. I'm remaining Mr. Jacob Feinberg. And you're remaining Mrs. Jacob Feinberg."

But the wife had turned from Feinberg to Iceberg.

"You've said enough," she said evenly. "Either you change your name, or I'm getting out."

"Get," said Mr. Feinberg.

And she got . . .

It was just about six months later that Mr. Feinberg called his wife upon the 'phone.

"Don't hang up on me, dearest," he said pleadingly. "I've made a mistake, and I'm only calling to apologize. Will you—"

"You're too late," was the reply. "I'm leaving for Reno tomorrow. I'm going to divorce you."

Mr. Feinberg grew panicky.

"But, Mildred, you can't do that. Wait, baby. I've got a big surprise for you. Remember what you asked me to do? About changing my name, I mean. Well, I've done it. The court gave me permission this morning. You are no longer Mrs. Jacob Feinberg. You are Mrs. Jack Fitzroy!"

If he had expected a verbal caress, he was doomed to disappointment.

"It makes no difference now," he heard her say. "I'm going to Reno just the same."

"But, darling," he pleaded. "Don't you understand? I've done as you asked. I've changed from Feinberg to Fitzroy. Surely you—"

Once again she stepped in.

"I'm sorry, she said, "but it's no use now. It's too late. I don't expect to see or hear from you again. Goodby."

And that was the end of that. Our hero cried bitterly. Because our hero didn't know when he was well off . . .

We skip another two years just as blithely as you please, and we arrive at the present time. Mr. Jack Fitzroy was walking along Fifth avenue without a care in the world. Suddenly his heart skipped a beat. Mildred, the girl who had divorced him, had just walked by!

Mrs. Fitzroy turned back. He took her arm. She looked up in surprise. They shook hands warmly.

"Gee, Mildred!" cried the man. "I'm certainly glad to see you again. You're looking fine. Been living on the Coast, haven't you?"

"Yes," replied the woman. "And I'm very happy. I went to California as soon as the divorce came through, and I've been living there ever since. And, by the way, I'm married again."

"Married?" replied Mr. Fitzroy with a slight catch in his voice. "To whom?"

"You wouldn't know him," replied his ex-wife. "It's a man named Feinberg." . . .

Football and Murder for 70,000

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Anybody interested in the technique of murder and football will find both on exhibition in "70,000 Witnesses," the new picture at the Penn. The star player of one team falls dead as he is about to score a touchdown—and some desperate gamblers clean up $310,000. That may not be the exact sum, but it is sufficient to relieve the depression as far as the aforesaid desperate gamblers are concerned.

Mr. Seibel

It turns out that the gridiron star has been murdered. Some bright mind hits upon the simple idea of having the entire game played over again, just as it was played when the crime was committed. They do that—and of course catch the murderer. Which was a great and grievous shock to loyal Pittsburghers, who would never have thought Kenneth Thomson would do anything like that.

Particularly not when the victim was a good football player. If the football coach who always winds up with "It's up to you" were murdered, nobody but his mother would care.

While it does not seem possible to re-enact a game in the way the strategic sleuths do it, chiefly because the ball would not remember what it had done, the story is presented plausibly and entertainingly. Phillips Holmes and Dorothy Jordan are a pleasant pair of lovers, but the real star of the picture is the bibulous Charlie Ruggles as a reporter who uses a bottle against mike fright. The chief mystery about the story is why nobody thinks of a simple and direct method of investigation. It would have been just as easy for the pal to remember about the sweater and the bottle which solve the mystery.

Zasu Pitts and Thelma Todd have a very clever rough-and-tumble comedy, and there's an animated cartoon that makes paper-hanging seem a pleasure, but we went away sorrowful over the fate of our Kenneth Thomson.

'Two Against World' in Stanley

By EDWARD W. GOSS

The Stanley's current offering, "Two Against the World," with Constance Bennett in the starring role opposite Neil Hamilton, is an interesting picture despite the fact that it employs trite situations.

The acting of Hamilton and Miss Bennett saves the production from falling into the category of "just another picture with a court room scene." The usual murder, with its usual accessories of wild reporters, headlines and an innocent person involved by circumstantial evidence, are all in the picture. Happily Miss Bennett and Hamilton draw attention from the story to themselves by their excellent portrayals.

Miss Bennett plays a rich girl whose life is composed of everything pleasurable. Hamilton is a young attorney struggling to get ahead. They meet. Hamilton is one experience the rich young lady has never had, and she "goes for him" in a grand way. Their little affair of the heart coasts along smoothly enough until Constance's brother kills a man who he believes is not doing his sister's reputation any good. By a twist of fate (or maybe by a twist of the directors) Constance is blamed for the killing and Hamilton must prosecute for the state.

Stars Recall Old Days

Even in the midst of present glories, Hollywood players can still remember when they were very young.

Buster Keaton recalls the first time his father seized him by the seat of his pants and tossed him up a piece of scenary so that he could slide down into a somersault. Norma Shearer has never forgotten cooking over a gas jet while trying to obtain work in New York City. Marie Dressler remembers the time she posed on a sled with her sister for her first snapshot. When the negative was developed, they cut Marie out of the picture.

Clark Gagle likes to tell the story about the time he went swimming in an old coal pit near Hopedale, O., and came out looking like a darky. Wallace Beery recalls the most exciting day of his youth when he ran away with a circus at the age of 14. Marion Davies lived around the corner from a fire station in East Brooklyn, N. Y., and still remembers the thrill she got from hearing horses' hoofs pound on the pavements.

John Gilbert often unbends to tell about the time he was forced to fight a fire in Laurel Canyon until he singed his hair and eyebrows and burned holes in his clothes.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 10.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Eighty-two years ago yesterday California entered the union, on a bet. The bet was that the country would eventually be called California and not America.

Will Rogers

We took it away from Mexico the next year after we found it had gold.

When the gold was all gone, we tried to give it back, but Mexico was too foxy for us. In '49 the wayward sons out of ten thousand families crossed the country, and the roads was so rough they couldn't get back.

Just when the mining had petered out somebody discovered a moving picture camera, and the old days of '49 were on again. Now child prodigies come by the bus loads. Fords are packed with literary geniuses. My pictures alone have been the means of bringing every hard-looking old "bird" in the world out here. It's a great old state, we furnish the amusement to the world, sometimes conscientious, sometimes unconscientious, sometimes by our films, sometimes by our orators, but you can't beat it.

Yours, WILL.

BABE TO MAKE SERIES GREATER SHOW

Babe Ruth

A LOT OF color of which it would have been stripped otherwise is saved to the world series by the development that Babe Ruth has passed all danger of an appendicitis operation and will be in there for the Yankees trying to sock the pitchers of the National League champions when the diamond derby gets going two weeks from next Wednesday. A world series is a world series, of course, under any conditions, and the high spot of the baseball year, but such an event with Ruth in the cast carries a heap of extra thrills for the seeing, listening and reading fans of the nation that no other individual player could supply.

The Babe is more than a home run hitter. He is the greatest showman and the most colorful player in the game, the most majestic figure that ever strode to the plate. Each time at bat is an act in itself. There is a thrill when he strikes out as well as when he wallops the ball over the fence. He is the only player that ever packed drama into a third strike. There is only one Ruth, and his presence in the big series for the tenth time after a lapse of three years will give it a more gripping national appeal than it could possibly have if he were missing.

FROM ONE MORE angle, Charley Grimm is proving a different kind of manager from the average type. The style long has been to order players on a first-place club not to mention the pennant before it has been cinched, and under no circumstances to let their thoughts or conversation run to the world series.

All that sort of stuff is out, as far as Grimm is concerned. He's not trying to keep his Cub players from doing what he thinks is the perfectly natural thing for them to do. He declares it would be foolish to order the Bruins not to talk about the world series; that it might bother them more than anything else he could say.

GRIMM HIMSELF DOESN'T hesitate to talk about the derby, though he isn't taking the pennant for granted and qualifies his remarks with "if we are fortunate enough to finish first in our league."

As Carroll Yerkes, former Mackman recently acquired, will not be eligible, the Bruins will have only one southpaw if they get into the series—Jakie May. But Grimm doesn't share the view of the experts that this will be a handicap when the star left-hand hitters of the Yankees are encountered. He says he has some right-handers with stuff enough to bother any left-hand hitters in the business.

ON THE BROOKLYN club are four men who aggregate a total of 100 years in baseball. Max Carey, Jack Quinn, Otto Miller and Casey Stengel make up this century quartet. Max Kase asked each to pick out of the hundreds and hundreds of players he had seen one whom he could place on a pedestal as being outstanding in his contribution to the development and popularity of the game. Quinn named Babe Ruth. Stengel's choice was Walter Johnson. Miller could think of none to compare with Nap Rucker. Carey did not hesitate an instant. "Honus Wagner," he replied with finality. "He had every fine quality and instinct one could look for in a player. He could do anything and everything on the field. Hit? There have been few better. Field? Why he could always go that extra foot of ground and come up with a ball that had looked certain to go through for a hit. He was one of the best base runners in the business. When he set sail to steal a bag, that base almost invariably was stolen when he started. And could the old boy make throws?

Honus Wagner

"THERE WAS A MAN," Carey continued almost reverently. "He never was too busy to lend a helping hand, and no rookie was too humble to get Ol' Jay's attention. Honus took a special delight in helping and teaching the youngsters.

"With such qualities, it was inevitable that Wagner should be an idol. He was almost worshiped by the fans. Honus fills the bill. He's the one I'd pick as having given more to the game than anybody else, among all the players I have seen, or played with or against."

IF MINNEAPOLIS WINS the American Association pennant and then defeats Newark in the junior world series, Business Manager George Weiss, of the Newark club, will have the unpleasant experience of being beaten by his own cast-offs.

As business manager of the Baltimore club last spring, Weiss sold First Baseman Joe Hauser and Outfielder Harry Rice to Minneapolis, and after taking the business reins at Newark he also sold Second Baseman Andy Cohen to Donie Bush's club.

POLO PLAYERS AND enthusiasts agree that the field of the Deer Park Polo Club, in historic Mt. Braddock Bottoms, several miles from Uniontown, is the finest and fastest in this section of the country. Lying in a huge bowl, with mountain ridges on all sides, the polo field is part of the Lazy Hour Ranch, operated by B. C. Cence, formerly connected with the Pittsburgh Hunt Club, and at one time a riding instructor at Culver Military Institute. The Deer Park Club boasts the youngest polo players in Pennsylvania in Ashby Marshall, 11, and Richard Marshall, Jr., 15, of Dunbar, Pa. Others on the team, in addition to Cence, are Robert Hughes, of Connellsville; J. V. Thompson II, and Art Aaron, of Uniontown; Ray Johnson, of McKeesport, and Alex Freede, of Pittsburgh.

STEEPLECHASING AND FLAT racing also are listed among the accomplishments of the Deer Park outfit, and this afternoon witnesses their first attempt at staging a steeplechase race meeting. Pittsburgh horsemen have entered for several of the events and the general enthusiasm is added evidence of the growing interest in steeplechasing in Western Pennsylvania.

Lovers of this sport may look forward to further developments. Next year should see stronger and larger cards at the various centers—the Pittsburgh Hunt Club and the Chestnut Ridge Hunt Club, besides the well-established Westmoreland Hunt Club, which, incidentally, will hold its annual races on Columbus Day at the Greensburg course.

OUT IN CALIFORNIA they have, or had, a boxing referee big enough to think about the other fellow. Lieut. Jack Kennedy, one of the best ring officials in the state, has voluntarily retired to give other referees a chance to rotate into paying jobs oftener.

Some of those referees have no other means of livelihood. Kennedy has a job in the Navy. Gates were becoming smaller and shows were becoming fewer. Kennedy felt the decent thing to do was to step aside when the fistic sport was in the doldrums and referee's jobs were scarce, so that he would not be taking money that might be needed more urgently by somebody else.

Mickey Walker

OPINION DIFFERS AS to the effect Mickey Walker's short stature will have on Max Schmeling's punching in the big fight next Monday week. Mickey's followers believe he will be so hard to hit as to give Max a lot of trouble, but there is less worry in the German's camp on that score than there was at the start. Joe Jacobs hired as a sparring partner for Schmeling Joe Banovic, who is of about the same size as Walker and employs Mickey's bulldog style. The first two times they boxed, Banovic bothered Max a great deal, but on the third day Schmeling solved the problem and is said to have fairly murdered the shorter man.

LAYDEN CUTS DAILY DRILLS FOR SQUAD

By JESS CARVER

Duquesne's two-a-day practice routine comes to an end today and Carnegie Tech's gridiron warriors are slated for a half holiday as the Dukes complete the tenth and the Tartans the third day of preseason training.

Results of the drills so far have been highly satisfactory to the coaches at both schools, despite the handicap of heat and illness to the Red and Blue squad.

LAYDEN SATISFIED

Coach Layden, with only four days left to work his men before the inaugural contest with Westminster under the lights at Forbes Field next Friday night, is pretty well set on his starting lineup—its a secret, so don't ask—and barring accident or the sudden arousing of a still dorment player—will stick to the setup he has on his mind at present.

Wally Steffen, in charge at Carnegie during the enforced absence of Bob Waddell, whose mother was buried yesterday, thoughtfully studied the demeanor of his Tartans after their workout and decided to let them off this afternoon. The gesture was deeply appreciated by the athletes, who have put in two strenuous days of drill.

Steffen yesterday sent the Tartans through a long forward passing drill. The four aspirants for the quarterback job, Bevevino, Dueger, McCurdy and Carlson worked hard and earnestly, and there was little to choose between 'em.

STEWART SHINES

Colin (Red) Stewart, regular end last year, and Tony Ostrosky, of New Castle, a sub wingman, pulled down heave after heave directed their way by the Tech backs. Every time Stewart pulls in the ball, his pal, Co-captain Bill Sample, grunts. Bill grunted and grunted yesterday. Another lad who exhibited class in nailing the pigskin while galloping at full speed was Bill Spisak, sophomore halfback candidate.

It was a treat to watch the Dukes as they galloped through their afternoon session. Coach Layden did not scrimmage his men, but sent them through long formation drills. Ben Ciccone, varsity center, was not called upon to perform, and joined the list of non-combats. He is expected to be ready for duty by Monday.

The Dukes will stage two workouts next Thursday, the day prior to the opening game, working out on the Bluff in the afternoon and that night at Forbes Field.

EXPLANATIONS OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOONS: A 120-MILE BRIDGE—The bridge extending over 120 miles in Flanders became a necessity as a result of one of the most thrilling episodes in the First Battle of Ypres, fought between October 18 and November 10, 1914. The Allied armies were retreating toward Dixmude with the victorious Germans relentlessly pursuing them. To frustrate the invader the Allies took what is probably the most heroic step in martial history. They cut the dikes and unleashed the floods of the North Sea against the German armies. As the field of battle become flooded, the Germans presently became mired in the bog. Their artillery was swept away, a large number of men were drowned, and the survivors scrambled anxiously to the few small pieces of high ground. The most elementary force known to man thus repelled the invader, but the Allies had to restore contact with the enemy over a pontoon bridge 120 miles long, covering the flooded area. EDISON'S CLOCK—The faceless clock, which once belonged to Edison and which is now kept in the recreated group of Edisonia in Dearborn, Mich., expressed the great inventor's conviction that a scientist's work is measured not by chronology but by results. It was also his humorous rebuke to "clock-watchers." TWO CHAMPIONSHIPS IN ONE YEAR—Edward Lee, of the New York Athletic Club, has been playing billiards only six years, but has been in tournament play for two years. In 1931 and 1932 he has been the National Amateur three-cushion billiards title holder, and was the first American to compete in the world amateur tournament when he played at Vichy. Not only is he proficient with the cue, but also has become famous in aquatic sports. For the years 1928 and 1931 he was the National A. A. U. long distance swimming champion, holding both billiards and swimming titles the latter year. Lee is the only athlete in the annals of the New York Athletic Club to hold two national titles simultaneously.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—The Pirates have a heavy date with the Phillies at the Baker Bowl this afternoon. The rival factions of the Keystone State are slated to stage a doubleheader which was inserted into the playing chart when the schedule was prepared last winter. In other words it is not one of those synthetic things.

Be that as it may, the Pittsburghers are eager to make some September hay. As they relaxed yesterday the Cubs defeated the Braves and extended their flag advantage to six games, a margin that stands as a stupendous thing when one realizes that the season will end two weeks from tomorrow.

MEINE, FRENCH SET

A double success on the part of the Buccos, nevertheless, would make them feel mighty good. The invaders are ready to swing into action behind Heinie Meine and Larry French, the same pair of hurlers who downed the world champion Cardinals at Forbes Field on Labor Day. On the other hand, the Buccos appreciate that winning two at Forbes Field is somewhat different in taking a pair in the Baker Bowl where the short fences beckon.

Manager Shotton has two left-handers ready for the Pirates in Jim Elliott and Snipe Hansen. Elliott has been a bugaboo to the Buccos in the two years he has toiled for the Phillies, and while Hansen is just a newcomer he seems to have learned some of the tricks known to Big Jim.

The Pirates and Phillies have mixed in 19 games this year and the Quakers have copped the verdict no less than 14 times. So it behooves the Buccos to speed up for the three remaining contests. A single contest slated for Monday will bring the season's series to a close. The Pirates will rest tomorrow.

MEET BRAVES NEXT

After finishing up with the home team on Monday, the Rovers will move to Boston where they are to meet the Braves in three games before going to the Polo Grounds to clash with the skidding Giants. Three games are scheduled with Bill Terry's club.

The Pirates will hurry back to Pittsburgh one week from tomorrow night after closing their series at the Polo Grounds. They are due to rest up in Pittsburgh on the succeeding Monday, after which they will journey to Chicago to meet the Bruins in four games. A dual bill between the Bucs and Bears is on the slate for one week from Tuesday.

The Corsairs will close the season in St. Louis, where four games will be played. A dual bill with the Redbirds one week from Sunday will wind things up.

BROUILLARD VICTOR

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, former welterweight champion, moved out of his class last night and gave Ad Zachow, of Dover, N. H., a sound trouncing in the Boston Garden's 10-round feature bout. Zachow, holder of the New England middleweight title, was unable to carry a single round. He weighed 152½ and his conqueror scaled 148½.

Nick Altrock

Baseball's Humorist

Says:

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10.—If all the world quit chewing gum, young Mr. Wrigley still wouldn't have to climb into his Rolls and ride over the hills to the poorhouse. This year the Cubs' turnstiles have been twirling around like propeller blades and it's a wonder 17 or 18 ticket takers weren't trampled in the rush.

Nick Altrock

And George M. Cohan couldn't have staged a better box office climax than the Cubs' management. There the club was, out on the road a few weeks ago, slowly going to pieces. Then Bill Veeck calls Manager Hornsby in and presents him the gate—nicely garnished with $20,000 worth of lettuce, but still the gate.

The Cubs then convalesce quickly under Nurse Charley Grimm and return to Chicago with a temperature of 98.6, an average of .550, and a drawing power of 40,000 fans a day. What could be sweeter than that in a vinegar year like this?

VINES ATTAINS FINAL ROUND

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines stood in the final round of the National tennis championship today, just as well satisfied perhaps that there are no more Cliff Sutters to conquer.

The tall Pasadena youngster, defending champion, battled Sutter through two and one-half hours of torrid tennis in the semi-finals yesterday, four times stood within two points of elimination and finally survived the gruelling 75-game struggle by scores of 4-6, 8-10, 12-10, 10-8, 6-1.

Vines' oponent in the finals awaited the outcome of a duel between Henri Cochet, of France, and Wilmer Allison, of Texas, four sets of which were played before darkness forced postponement last evening. Cochet won the first set, 6-1, and the fourth, 6-3, the other two going to Allison by 12-10 and 6-4 counts. The fifth and deciding set was to be played this morning, the winner to face Vines later in the day.

Fight Results

At Springfield, O.—Ralph (Smoky) Magard defeated Pete La Cross, 10 rounds; Tommy Glynn knocked out George Coleman, 2 rounds; Lou Sanders and Benny Lenny drew, 6 rounds.

At Paris—Jose Arilla and Maurice Huguenin drew, 10 rounds.

At Boston—Lou Brouillard defeated Ad Zachow, 10 rounds.

At Hollywood—Kenneth LaSalle defeated Ted Morgan, 10 rounds.

SPORT VIGNETTES

There's a gent in town who will be sadly disappointed if the Pirates don't get into the world series this fall . . . He was a big league pitcher himself for 12 years and never was lucky enough to get into a series, and, what's more, believe it or not, he's never seen a world series game . . . The gentleman in question is Wilbur Cooper, former star southpaw of the Pirates, who for the last eight years of his service in Pittsburgh livery averaged 20 victories a season and turned in more than 200 wins for teams that weren't good enough to win pennants . . . Wilbur joined the Pirates in 1912 and was traded to the Cubs after the 1924 season . . . The Pirates didn't win a pennant between 1909 and 1925, or during the time the hard-working Cooper was with them . . . They came close in 1921, only to blow up . . . After winning in 1925, they repeated in 1927, and it looked for a time this season as if they would come through, and Cooper, who never has been on the scene of a world series combat, although one of the outstanding southpaw pitchers of all time, is pulling for them to make the grade even yet so he can take in a series.

Wilbur Cooper

If you don't think Cooper's record is a peculiar one, how about that of Babe Ruth, who will cut his tenth piece of world series pie this fall? . . . And then there's Burleigh Grimes, who has been in world series with the Dodgers, Pirates and Cardinals and now is with the Cubs and headed for some more of the sugar . . . And then there is the case of Frankie Frisch, who has been in there so often in the world series that he probably won't know what to do with himself on this outside this year.

Cooper is just another Walter Johnson. . . . The great pitcher of the Washington Senators seemed doomed never to get into the blue ribbon classic, and he just made it against the Giants in 1924 and the Pirates in 1925, when he was far from the great pitcher he had been.

Would you say Earl Grace, the Pirate catcher, fell from grace when he made his first error of the year the other day, after setting a new major league record? . . . Well, anyway, Paul Sullivan knows a C. P. A. who doesn't know how to account for himself.—HARRY KECK.

JOCKEY DIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Thomas Wade, 23-year-old steeplechase jockey from Westbury, N. Y., died yesterday from injuries received when he fell from Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Hal Broom at Belmont Park Thursday.

WORLD SERIES PLANS SET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—If, as appears likely, the Chicago Cubs furnish the opposition to the New York Yankees, records for attendance and gate receipts figure to be shattered in the forthcoming World Series, which, it was decided, will open on Wednesday, September 28, at the Yankee Stadium.

Since the Yankees last appeared in the series in 1928 the big Bronx ball park has been enlarged so that its seating capacity is 69,946 and the maximum "gate" $234,000, figured on the customary championship scale of $1.10 for bleachers, $3.30 for unreserved portions of the grandstands, $5.50 for reserved grandstand seats and $6.60 for box chairs.

Meeting yesterday with Commissioner Landis to arrange details for the forthcoming series, the magnates decided to make no change in the price of tickets. Thus, a capacity turnout for the opener or at any other game in New York will eclipse the record of 63,600 cash customers, set at the Yankee Stadium in 1926.

Representatives of the Yankees, led by Col. Jacob Ruppert, and the Cubs, for whom President William Veeck acted as spokesman, manifested principal interest in the discussion of World Series arrangements. No other American League club was represented, but Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, still possessing mathematical chances in the National League race, had their delegates on hand for contingent purposes.

SENATORS GAIN GROUND IN BATTLE FOR SECOND PLACE

CUBS ADVANCE IN STRUGGLE FOR FLAG

Associated Press.

While the New York Yankees and Chicago Cubs proceed leisurely to snare the victories that bring them closer and closer to the major leagues' two championships, Walter Johnson's Washington Senators are roaring along at a terrific clip that may yet earn them second place in the American League.

Twenty victories in their last 24 games have carried the Senators to within a game and a half of the Philadelphia Athletics and in excellent position to move into the runner-up post should the A's continue to falter.

PITCHERS STAR

That streak of Washington's has been featured by excellent pitching, especially from Fred Marberry, Bill McAfee and Alvin Crowder but it was the Senators' bats that beat back the St. Louis Browns, 6-4, yesterday.

The Yankees, needing four victories to clinch the pennant, got absolutely nowhere, dropping two games to the Detroit Tigers, 14-13 in 14 innings and 4-1 in five frames.

The Boston Red Sox overcame a six-run lead and whipped the Chicago White Sox, 9-6, in 10 innings.

CUBS MOVE CLOSER

The Cubs moved one game closer to the National League pennant by beating the Boston Braves, 5-2, as Lon Warneke scattered nine hits and hung up his twenty-first victory of the season against only five defeats. Twelve more Cub victories automatically will give Charley Grimm's club the pennant.

Don Hurst's single in the twelfth drove in the run that enabled the Phillies to trim the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2, and make a clean sweep of the series. The New York Giants split two games with the Cincinnati Reds, dropping the first 10-4, and winning the second 11-1.

Mel Ott hit a home run in each game to boost his season's total to 34, only one behind the National League leader, Chuck Klein, of the Phillies.

NOVICES GET SHORT BOUTS

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

At last a district boxing promoter has taken a tumble to himself and instituted a change in the order of things that long has been needed.

Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, is the hero of the hour, and his new stunt has to do with arranging four-round preliminaries for boxers just out of the amateur ranks or with very little professional experience.

Not long ago, one of the very best of the local amateurs turned professional on one of the outdoor cards and was going along winning by a mile for three rounds and then became tired and refused to leave his corner. Others in their first professional battles, scheduled for six rounds, have taken bad beatings after becoming exhausted.

McGirr will be the first of the indoor promoters of the area to open his season. He will pry off the lid next Thursday night with a show featuring Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., and Billy Holt, of Homewood, in the 10-round main bout. Trippe won their first meeting, at Motor Square Garden, a couple of seasons ago. Backing up this headliner will be two six-round bouts and two four-rounders.

Between Rounds

Carl Gross, of Braddock, will take the place of Gene Baker, of Johnstown, against Leo Clements, Jeannette heavyweight, in the second bout at Hickey Park Monday night. This is the second change in the program, Johnny Chiodo, also of Johnstown, having been pulled out as the opponent of Johnny Datto in the first 10-rounder in favor of Jimmy Dean. Erie Negro. Jimmy Thomas and Art Giroux are in the windup. Datto returned yesterday from a trip to Cleveland and resumed training at the Pittsburgh Lyceum.

George Panka is being considered as the opponent of Isadore Gastanaga, the Spanish heavyweight, in the 10-round semi-final to the Tuffy Griffiths-Max Baer bout in the Chicago Stadium, September 23.

Battling Gizzy is being lined up for a bout in New York's Madison Square Garden next month. Meanwhile his bout with Midget Mike O'Dowd at Bridgeport, O., has been set back one week to September 19.

Motor Square Garden will be reopened for boxing two weeks from next Monday night instead of the first week in October. The Kapphan Arena will stage its first show one week from next Friday. The Garden may offer Al Brown against Mose Butch as its opening headliner, while the Kapphan Arena is at work on a match between Ted Yarosz and Ignacio Ara, the Spaniard, who knocked out Buck McTiernan in Madison Square Garden, New York, last winter. A Yarosz-Lou Brouillard match is in the making for Motor Square Garden.

Sid Silas, New York lightweight, who boxed around here last winter, has returned and is working out at the Pittsburgh Lyceum. Tony Marino, Duquesne flyweight, has returned from a stay around Ligonier and will resume training next week.

Hal Finney, Negro welterweight, just out of the amateurs, is having difficulty getting matches. He'll fight anybody the promoters can get for him.

'Arden Downs Races May Be Halted

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 10.—Considerable doubt existed today as to whether automobile races scheduled for tomorrow at Arden Downs would be staged.

A committee representing the Chartiers Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church conferred with District Attorney Warren S. Burchinal yesterday, objecting to the staging of the races. The citizens were assured everything possible would be done to halt the races.

Leads Tech's Quarterback Race

ANGELO BEVEVINO . . . . . HE'S ONE OF FOUR IN FIGHT FOR JOB

One of the keenest fights on the Carnegie Tech football squad as it prepares for the new season is for the regular quarterback berth. Bevevino, on the strength of his showing last fall, is in the lead, with Harry McCurdy, Stuart Dueger and Lefty Carlson trying to oust him. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

WOMAN RACER ENTERS MEET

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—They say they never come back. But they do.

When Hilda Mueller won two national outboard championships in succession in 1930 and 1931 she said she was through. At 20 this daring miss had established a record that perhaps may never be equaled by her sex.

She drove her outboard at a terrific clip through a field of the country's best men drivers to win Class A, division II, national championship races for two consecutive years. Then she retired.

Then news of the Central Division outboard championships that are being sponsored by the Chicago Herald and Examiner to be staged on the World's Fair lagoon on September 18 broke.

She was weakening and she knew it. Then the news of the beautiful William Randolph Hearst trophy came and Hilda's mind was made up.

She did not wait to write for an entry blank. She just grabbed a 'phone and from Bay City, Mich., came this:

"This is Hilda Mueller. You may not of heard of me, but not so long ago I was some tomatoes in an outboard. I won two national championships and then retired.

"You can tell the world for me that that part of my life is over. Tell the gang that Hilda's back and to watch out for me on the turns, and before I lose my breath send me an entry blank."

And Hilda has competition. Not only from men but from her own sex. Ruth De Roo, from Flint, Mich., and Patsy Jean Bradley, of Hobart, Ind., are entered and will give Hilda all the competition she wants, and she surely likes it.

Miss Holm Sets New World Mark

TEMPE, Ariz., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—A new world record graced the women's National A. A. U. swimming championships last night as Eleanor Holm, of New York, one of the two champions successfully defending their crowns, swam the 220-yard backstroke in 2:57.8.

Her torpedo-like charge through the water was just 2 4-5 seconds faster than she or anyone else had done it before. Her world mark, established at the Olympic Games in Los Angeles, was 3:00.3.

Katherine Rawls, whose meteoric rise from the warm Florida waters had led her to more records than she can count on her fingers, held fast to the second Women's National crown she had defended in two nights, but again was disappointed in her ambition to better her present world mark in the 220-yard breaststroke.

Knockouts Mark Shriners' Battles

Six knockouts marked the amateur boxing show held yesterday at the annual picnic of the Shriners at Kennywood Park.

Shorty Washko, of the Billick A. C., stopped Mick Wargo, Valley View Club, in the first round; Al Conrad, Billick A. C., won by a technical knockout over Andy Curry, Valley View, second round; Jesse Graham, Braddock, Library, won by a technical knockout over J. Flaherty, Billick A. C., first round; Joe Hughes knocked out Andy Oendro, Braddock Library, first round; Anson Greaves, Billick A. C., knocked out Paul Wargo, Valley View, second round, and Billy Winso won by a technical knockout over Andy Grogan, Bender A. C., in the second round.

Lazy Hour 'Chase Carded Today

The Chestnut Ridge Hunt steeplechase is being staged today at the Lazy Hour Ranch, located at Dunbar, Pa., nine miles north of Uniontown. Six events are included on the program, calling for a junior hunter trial, a flat race, children's race, Lazy Hour Ranch steeplechase, Summit Hotel brush race and Chestnut Ridge timber race.

Among the horses entered is Starborn, owned by Bliss Flaccus, who won the recent steeplechase staged by the Pittsburgh Hunt Club. Flaccus will ride Starborn.

KNIGHTS GET FIRST WIN

BECKLEY, W. Va., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The ninth inning, with two home runs, furnished the big thrills last night as Beckley defeated Charleston, 10 to 8, in the third game of the Middle Atlantic League play-off. The series count now stands 2 to 1 in favor of Charleston.

Vernon Mackey, Charleston catcher, who made five hits in as many trips to bat, slugged out the first of the two circuit clouts, tieing the score after the Senators had trailed from the opening inning. Manager Holt Milner, of the Knights, wound up the game with the second homer, driving in Beasley, centerfielder, who had reached first on a hit over second base.

The Knights hit Howell Conklin, Charleston hurler, hard in the early innings, scoring seven runs before he was relieved by Burt Grimm. Three of the runs off Conklin came in the third after the first two Beckley batsmen had been retired. One additional run was scored before Grimm retired the side.

A rally in the fifth, when they scored six runs, put the Senators into the game. Three of the runs were snared off Max Butcher, and the others came after Ken McNeil took the mound for Beckley. Whitlock, Charleston thirdbaseman first to face McNeil, hit a triple, scoring two men and was driven in himself on a single by Byrd, second baseman. The score:

Schmeling-Walker Bout Faces Setback

SUMMIT, N. J., Sept. 10.—(INS.)—The Mickey Walker-Max Schmeling fight, scheduled September 19 in New York, today faced a postponement of one week because of a recently lanced boil on Walker's left forearm which has not responded to treatment.

Jimmy Johnston, of Madison Square Garden, and a doctor from New York were due in Walker's camp here today to examine Walker and confer with Manager Jack Kearns on the possible necessity of a postponement.

State Chess Title Tourney Scheduled

At the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Chess Club, held at its headquarters, 608 Investment Building, plans were laid for holding the chess championship tourney of Pennsylvania. The date for the title affair will be decided upon at a later meeting.

Dr. Louis Jaffe was elected general secretary of the local organization. All those who desire to participate in the state tourney are requested to communicate with the officers at the club headquarters.

Babe Ruth's All-America Baseball Team

The annual selection by Babe Ruth, baseball's most famous player, appears exclusively in Pittsburgh in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph tomorrow.

It is a compilation of the outstanding players of the year in both major leagues.

One of the Pirates is a member.

PANTHERS GET EXTRA DRILL

WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 10.—Windber ice cream parlors and the town's lone movie palace will be bare of Pitt football players this afternoon, for the first time in years.

Ordinarily Sutherland releases his athletes on Saturday afternoon, but this week the Panthers will remain right in camp and likely will engage in the first scrimmage of the year.

The necessity of getting the team into shape at an early date this year and the fact that the Panthers have shown so much progress already, moved Sutherland to depart from his usual procedure.

KICKERS DRILL

In addition to calling a practice today, the Pitt coach ordered the kickers and would-be kickers out last night after supper. This move, however, was to permit them to miss a lot of the hot sun.

Taking advantage of the hot weather, Sutherland had the boys in pads yesterday afternoon and he and the line coaches gave a lot of detailed instruction in the proper use of the hands for defensive linemen.

Conspicuous yesterday as the linemen went through offensive drill was the tanned Doc Hartwig. The rangy Benwood, W. Va., youth, has stood out in both days of drill, and looks fit to step right into a varsity berth. Held out last year, because of an injury, he is making Cheeso Onder work harder than ever to retain, not only his newly reduced figure, but his place on the varsity.

HELLER SHINES

Heller and Cutri appeared to the best of the kickers in last evening's drill. The former apparently is persuaded that he can kick and that is all that is necessary for it will be remembered that after the coaches persuaded him that he could carry a ball and pass it, he developed into a stellar halfback.

Mel Brown and Art Sekay were the new arrivals in camp, both getting a warm welcome, Seigel greeting the former like a long lost brother. Seigel hadn't been home all summer, and was worried about the condition of the Iowa corn and hogs.

Brooklyn Eleven Signs John Karcis

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(INS.)—John Karcis, former Carnegie Tech fullback, today signed a contract to play with the Brooklyn Dodgers Football Club.

The Greater Pittsburgh Motorcycle Club will hold its annual hill climb tomorrow afternoon at Wittmer's Farm on Perry highway. The leading racers in the country are entered.

Auto Racing Title Event at Detroit

DETROIT, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—For the first time since automobile racing became a major sport, the national title is going to be decided on a one-mile dirt track.

The 120 points at stake in a 100-mile race at the State Fair grounds this afternoon, last A. A. A. sponsored event of the season, will determine whether the championship goes to Fred Frame, winner at Indianapolis; Bob Carey, who is 30 points behind, or Howdy Wilcox, who trails by 80 points.

Twenty-two drivers, including Billy Arnold, who has been on the sidelines since he was injured at Indianapolis Memorial Day, are bidding for places among the 14 starters in the race, which was postponed last Sunday because of rain.

LA CROSS BEATEN

SPRINGFIELD, O., Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Ralph (Smoky) Maggard, Covington (Ky.) middleweight, outboxed Pete La Cross, of Fort Wayne, Ind., in 10 rounds here last night. Tommy Glynn, of Springfield, also a middleweight, knocked out George Coleman, of Indianapolis, in the second round of the scheduled 10-round semi-final. Lou Sanders, Springfield lightweight, fought a six-round draw with Benny Lenny, of Fort Wayne.

SCOTT ELEVEN COPS OPENER

By JULIUS LEVIN

Held scoreless in the initial period, Scott High School's football team came back in the second, third and final quarters to mark down a 27-to-6 victory over Uniontown High in the opening scholastic gridiron game of the season under the lights on its own field last night.

The Uniontown team found Scott's line too powerful to be penetrated, and scored in the final period via the air. The Gross brothers and Spanik scored for Scott. The lineup:

Grays Meet Giants In Double Bill

The Homestead Grays will meet the American Giants, of Chicago, in a double-header at Forbes Field today, the first game being scheduled to get under way at 2 o'clock. The Giants are making their first appearance in Pittsburgh in 10 years.

Smokey Joe Williams and either Lefty Williams or Salmon will hurl for the Grays.

Old-time baseball stars will line up this afternoon at Carrick against the Carrick Eagles.

The Dormont nine defeated the Book nine, champion of the City League, at Kennywood Park yesterday, the contest being an attraction of the Shriners' picnic. The score was 10 to 4.

LOCAL RACQUET DOUBLES PLAY OPENS TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The last fast week-end of 1932 district tennis play gets under way this afternoon with the inaugural tussles of the second annual Allegheny Country Club invitation men's doubles tourney slated for the rectangles on Sewickley Heights and wind-up of the yearly Beaver County titular melee billed for Ambridge. First and second round trophy tilting and initial bracket consolation combat will make up today's Allegheny card, semi-final and final contests being listed for tomorrow.

George Henderson, husky Stanton Heights ace, encounters Bob Lampus, youthful Shannopin net leader, in the Beaver final. Henderson having disposed of Howard Campbell, College Hill luminary, and Lampus having eliminated Stewart Snodgrass, Geneva mainstay, in penultimate frays. Henderson, a severe forehand driver with heavy service, cavorted in seven tournaments in the British Isles this summer and landed runner-up honors in four.

STAR TEAMS ENTERED

A flock of powerful teams will compete for honors of the A. C. C. conclave, second major grass court affair of the local campaign. Seeded at the top of the list are Dr. Dave and Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. pair, with the home club stars, Collie Burgwin and Bill Snyder, rated second. Other crack outfits include Billy O'Loughlin and Wally Arensberg, youthful Winged Head combine; McCook Reed and Dave Gilmore, promising new Edgewood-Allegheny coalition; Jack Beatty and Bob Schmertz, Stanton Heights-Edgeworth hopes; John Brown and Eddie Alcorn, clever Mount Lebanon entry; Hub Rinehart and Howard Burgwin, hard-hitting Stanton-Allegheny pair-up, and Tom Robinson and Joe Dilworth, powerful Fox Chapel veterans.

Frank Broida, minus his usual partner, Irvin Goodman, of Pitt, has joined with the writer in last minute hook-up caused by absence of Goodman and Dr. Jack Lauler.

PAIRINGS SET

Arrangements are in the making for women's singles and doubles exhibition features as portion of tomorrow's schedule on the Heights. According to plan, Mrs. W. P. Snyder, Jr., and Dorothy Jarvis, Allegheny satellites, will encounter the Western Pennsylvania champions, Margaret Carspecken, Morgantown ace, and Miriam Sullivan, P. A. A. contender, in dual action, with Miss Carspecken meeting Miss Jarvis in singles. W. P. Snyder, Jr., is chairman of the A. C. C. milling. He is assisted by G. C. Burgwin, Jr., and David Gilmore. Julius Boise, veteran "pro," is likewise aiding in the reeling off of hostilities. The pairings follow:

Dr. David L. O'Loughlin and Dr. John L. O'Loughlin vs. Tom Orr and Frank White; George Cooper and Richard Cooper vs. W. McCook Reed and David Gilmore; John D. Beatty and Robert C. Schmertz vs. John S. Richards and W. M. Doolittle, Jr.; J. S. Laughlin and A. L. Robinson vs. William L. O'Loughlin and Walter Arensberg; G. C. Burgwin, Jr., and W. P. Snyder, Jr., vs. William Gordon and Charles A. Woods, Jr.; John R. Brown and Edgar Alcorn vs. H. M. Rinehart and Howard Burgwin; Joseph Dilworth and T. A. Robinson vs. Joseph Holmes and John Holmes; J. F. Byers, Jr., and partner vs. Frank Broida and P. G. Sullivan.

Girls' Net Final Duels On Today

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Four girls, one from the East, one from the Far West, and two from the Mid-West, reached the final round of play for the national girls' grass court doubles tennis championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club yesterday.

The Mid-Westerners, Helen Fulton, of Chicago, and Elizabeth Kesting, of St. Paul, Minn., seeded fourth, scored an upset victory to eliminate the third ranked team of Bonnie Miller, Los Angeles, and Millicent Hirsch, New York, in a hard three-set encounter, 6-3, 9-11, 8-6. The East-West team, composed of Gracyn Wheeler, Santa Monica, Cal., star, and Katharine Winthrop, of Boston, the national indoors champion, advanced by defeating Helen Jones and Joanna Palfrey, both of Boston, 6-1, 6-4.

O'DOUL LIKELY SWAT KING

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Handsome Frank O'Doul, one of California's outstanding gifts to baseball, is likely to lead the National League batters this year. The boy with the perfect style at the plate has a comfortable lead on all competitors.

Early in the season, when Paul Waner was leading the pack I discussed the batting situation with Frank. O'Doul at that time was down with the obscure swatters, but he was not without his confidence.

When I asked him to enumerate some of the athletes, who, in his opinion had a chance to land the plum, Lefty called off a few, including Waner, Chuck Klein, Bill Terry and Chick Hafey. Also, I was admonished modestly not to forget a fellow named O'Doul.

A good golfer in trouble with his long shots could help his game by watching the Brooklyn slugger. When Frank is in his best stride he does not press. There is a smooth rhythm to his swing and his wrists co-ordinate with other parts of his body. When a batter's mental poise is correct he is not apt to press. The same applies to a golfer.

CHILLYSAUCE

Bill Terry has had a hard time of it with the Giants, apparently headed for a second-division berth when the curtain falls.

The Giants miss Travis Jackson. Here is one of the game's greatest shortstops on the sidelines almost all of the season through injuries.

One outstanding player makes a tremendous difference. Where would the Senators be without Joe Cronin, who already has driven in more than 100 runs? And Joe was out on account of illness in the early part of the race.

Cronin's dash, smartness, courage and skill are assets that are hard to find, especially in shortstops.

Speaking of clever shortfielders, it is a pleasant diversion these days among Jimmy Levey's friends to discuss the doings of the East End athlete. Jimmy is having a big season for the St. Louis Browns.

And Albert Mamaux is a big figure in the game now that his Newark Bears have clinched the International League flag.

Don't be surprised to see the former Prince of Dormont in a major-league managerial role some day.

GRID BROADCAST BAN LIFTED

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—The troublesome question of broadcasting left in the hands of the individual members, the Eastern Intercollegiate Association turned its attention today to the annual meeting on the interpretation of the football rules.

To present a more vivid picture of just how the new rules are going to work, Lou Little's Columbia eleven was nominated to give a demonstration at Baker Field this afternoon.

Various aspects of the changes in the code, affecting the kickoff, the use of the hands by defensive linemen, and the new dead ball rule, were to be described by Little, J. B. (Jock) Sutherland, of Pittsburgh; Eddie Casey, of Harvard; Ralph Sasse, of Army; Mal Stevens, of Yale, and H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, of Princeton.

Last night's sessions were marked by a partial lifting of the ban on broadcasting.

PITT'S STATUS UNCERTAIN

Whether or not Pitt will change its policy, which has been anti-broadcasting, will be determined when Athletic Director W. Don Harrison returns from the meeting in New York. Carnegie Tech's policy will be governed by Pitt's, as the Tartan's only home game worth putting on the air, that with Wash-Jeff, will be played in the Pitt Stadium. The Dukes are not permitted to broadcast their games at Forbes Field under the terms of their lease.

GALIDO BEATS SEKAY, WINS CITY TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

Mike Galido, a quiet, unassuming player at the Schenley public links for many years, reached his goal there yesterday afternoon on the sixteenth green when he defeated Art Sekay, backfield member of the University of Pittsburgh football team in the 36-hole final round of the city championship tourney, 3 and 2.

It was the first time that Galido had written his name on the city trophy, though he once reached the semi-final round. In his march to the championship, he defeated such stalwarts as Andy Swezdka, Francis Lally, Tom Barr, West Penn southpaw champion, and Sekay.

DEFEATED CHAMPION

Sekay's path to the final round was anything but a bed of roses. Walter Phillips, defending champion, and Kauffmann, five times city champion and three times national public links champ, had to be disposed of before he fell before Galido's wizardry.

It probably was one of the most brilliant finals ever staged over the muny course. The largest gallery that ever tramped the links watched some sensational shooting.

Galido finished the morning round 1 up, and at the twenty-fourth hole, was 3 up. But the match was far from over. On the twenty-eighth green Sekay squared the match, and set the gallery wild, but on the next three holes, Galido shot three's. Such golf would have beaten any muny player. It was a great match. Sekay proved a worthy finalist and Galido a worthy champion.

WOMEN'S FINAL TODAY

Gertrude Marouse and Mrs. Myrtle Stearns are clashing today in the 18-hole final match of the women's championship tournament at South Park. Mrs. Stearns gained the final round yesterday by eliminating Katherine Richards, 6 and 5, and Miss Marouse downed Miss Engeman, 6 and 5.

Playing fine golf, Anjeanette Hunter, of Oakmont, and Joe Royston, Jr., of Highland, paired yesterday to win top honors in the mixed foursome invitation tournament at the Pittsburgh Field Club. The pair turned in a card of 83-2—81. Mrs. W. H. Boggs, of Shannopin, and George McClure, of Chartiers Heights, scored an 84-4—80 to take second honors.

In the first division, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Kunkle, of Stanton Heights, led the field with a 91-15—76. Other first flight scores follow:

Betty Abernathy, Oakmont, and C. E. Robinson, Field Club, 85-6—79; Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Campbell, Stanton Heights, 87-4—83; Barbara Warmcastle and F. C. Johnston, Field Club, 88-7—81; Mr. and Mrs. Arch Irwin, Field Club, 87-11—76; Mary Kuhn and A. J. Diebold, Field Club, 91-9—82; Mrs. Saunders and A. Schroeder, Youghiogheny, 92-14—78; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Birmingham, Field Club, 93-14—79; Mrs. C. L. Wendt and Sid Lewars, Field Club, 94-8—86; Mrs. S. C. Lewars and C. L. Beares, Jr., Field Club, 93-8—85; Mrs. W. J. Curley and Bob McLaughlin, Field Club, 97-14—83; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Christy, Butler, 91-9—82; Mrs. T. M. Bennett and W. C. Cain, Youghiogheny, 98-12—86; Mrs. A. Smith and Sid Carson, Greensburg, 97-11—86.

ATTORNEYS IN TIE

A quartet wound up in a tie for honors in the kicker's handicap competition in the annual tournament of the Bar Association at Fox Chapel yesterday. E. H. Wicks, 94-22—72; R. L. McDonnell, 90-18—72; R. A. McCrady, 89-17—72, and J. A. Langfitt, 95-23—72, finished in the tie.

In the medal play sweepstakes, J. A. Langfitt led with a card of 95-13—82.

The senior tournament staged at the Pittsburgh Field Club yesterday was won by C. J. Deibold with a card of 81-8—73.

ROONEY HOLDS ICE HOPES

By CARL W. SHATTO

The local hockey situation is likely to be cleared up at a conference between Art Rooney, North Side sportsman, and Bill Dwyer, owner of the New York Americans of the National Hockey League, in New York today.

Virtual certainties are that Rooney will take over the Pittsburgh International League club, now held by local banking interests, and that the International League hockey will remain here for several years.

DWYER INTERESTED

Dwyer is financially interested in the Pittsburgh hockey territorial rights. Rooney's aim at today's conference is to have Dwyer guarantee that the National League will not crowd International League hockey out of Pittsburgh for several years. To achieve this aim, Rooney may permit Dwyer to become associated with him in the promotion of International League hockey here.

Rooney's trip to New York was prompted by the recent action of the local banking interests, who interrupted the reports of a National League hockey revival in Pittsburgh long enough to ask Art if he still was interested in taking over Duquesne Garden and the Yellow Jackets. Along with the club, Rooney was offered a long-term lease on the Craig street arena at very reasonable terms.

LEAGUE EXPECTS LOCALS

Rooney previously announced that he had reached a club transfer terms agreement with the banking interests. The only thing that can keep him out of the local hockey driver's seat, apparently, is an adverse decision by Dwyer.

That the International League chiefs expect Pittsburgh to return to the fold was indicated at the league meeting in Detroit last Thursday, when plans for the 1932-33 season were held up pending a clearing up of the situation here.

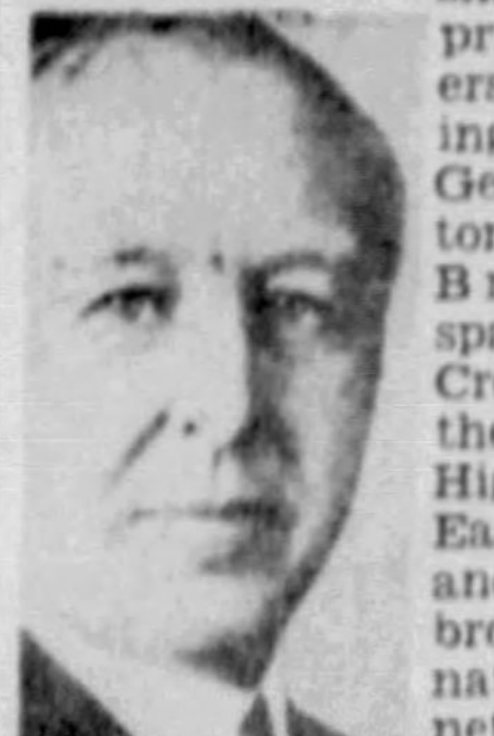
Ogden Mills' G. O. P. Talk On WCAE

Four nationally prominent figures are brought to radio listeners in three programs, one of which originates in Pittsburgh, today.

Former Gov. John S. Fisher, of Pennsylvania, and A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, share honors as principal speakers at the opening of the new George Washington Memorial Bridge, which spans the Turtle Creek Valley on the new Lincoln Highway between East McKeesport and Wilkinsburg, broadcast over a nation-wide NBC network through the facilities of KDKA at 3 p. m.



Mr. Fisher

Speaking at a political meeting in Portland, Me., Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills carries the Republican campaign to the nation over an NBC-WEAF network, including WCAE, tonight at 9:30.

Charles A. Miller, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, tells "What the R. F. C. Really Means" when he appears as guest speaker on the Columbia chain and WJAS from 10:15 to 10:45 tonight.

Program Pointers

Today marks the initial bow of one and the resumption of two other programs over Pittsburgh stations. On KDKA at 4:30 Marjory Stewart and her players inaugurate a unique type of nonsense program known as "Micro-phonies," a radio application of the "blackout" idea popular in modern stage revues . . . Frederic William Wile, Columbia's political analyst, returns for his tenth season of comment on national affairs on WJAS at 7 o'clock . . . An additional dance program makes its appearance on the WWSW schedule when the Schafer-Englert Orchestra re-opens at the Nixon Restaurant at 8:30.

Mr. Wile

Clem McCarthy's vivid description of the running of the famous Realization Stakes at Belmont Park today is broadcast over WCAE at 4:30.

Ruth Etting revives one of the songs that made her famous, "Ten Cents a Dance," as a WJAS highlight at 9.

An address by William E. Best, recently appointed to the new Home Loan Bank Board by President Hoover, will be broadcast from the Chamber of Commerce by KDKA Monday from 1 to 1:30 p. m.

At 9:30, on KDKA, "The Beggar on Horseback," by the Pittsburgh playwrights, George Kaufman and Marc Connelly, is presented by a cast of NBC actors. The musical portion of the program is an innovation, and unusual sound effects are employed.

Selections from the works of the three Russian composers, Tschaikovsky, Borodine and Rubinstein, are heard when Erno Rapee visits Moscow on WCAE at 8:30.

Globe-Trotter On Air At 6:15

The 6:30 news broadcast by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, again is scheduled 15 minutes earlier—at 6:15 tonight—in order that WCAE listeners may hear a resume of additional developments in the Men's National Tennis Tournament. The Globe-Trotter's 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 2:30 p. m. broadcasts are heard as usual.

A preview of the numerous interesting articles published in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly magazine, which is distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph, and in the March of Events section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, is broadcast on WCAE tonight at 7 o'clock.

Listening In— Unromantic Kate. Secret Wedding. Cowboy Thorgy.

Give Kate Smith another great big hand, everybody! . . . Because she made such a tremendous success of her role in the film, "The Big Broadcast," she's slated to start a full-length feature picture shortly. But that's not all — the Southern Songbird rejected heaps of manuscripts because they stressed the "heavy love" interest with the cryptic comment, "I'm not the romantic type," so Paramount has engaged Fannie Hurst, the well-known novelist and short story writer, to work out a special scenario for her.

Miss Smith

Among the latest radio personalities to attract attention is Billy White, male vocalist with Frank Westphal's Orchestra. Billy's voice is so high that listeners have inquired as to the name of the new "girl" singer.

Paul Douglas, the CBS announcer, and Sabra Worth, of the Columbia production staff, were married six weeks ago, but kept it a secret until the other day.

Ed Thorgersen is spending his vacation fishing on an Indian reservation . . . Leonard Lewis is trying out his prowess as an interior decorator on his new home in Plainfield, N. J., meanwhile wishing that he never started it.

Some Revisions Of Old 'Hoss in Stream' Slogan

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We'd like to interpolate a few sub-titles to the rather strangled Republican campaign slogan about not changing hosses in midstream:

Don't change tubs while taking a bath in red ink.

Don't change hats in a lunch wagon. Unless you get the best of it. Don't change your underwear at all in blizzards. And never substitute slate for coal unless you're selling it.

How did the hoss get in midstream anyway?

He sure must have made a terrific wreck of the wagon. And what was in the cart before the hoss ran away? Nothing but a load of slogans.

Say, that old hoss has been in midstream so long he ought to be a sea lion by now.

And, instead of figuring his trade-in value why don't they throw him a rope?

GOV. ROOSEVELT HOLDS LEAD IN CORN BELT

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Theodore Roosevelt wrote "The Winning of the West."

Franklin D. Roosevelt is writing a new version of that title in the returns pouring into the national headquarters of the presidential poll being conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Each week from the outset of the tabulation of poll replies Gov. Roosevelt has maintained a steady hold on the majority of the states west of the Mississippi. Unless there is a decided change between now and November 8 that section will certainly give him the lion's share of its electoral vote.

CORN BELT SWING

In the corn belt country of the Middle West particularly, Roosevelt thus far has appeared as the dominant choice of a substantial majority of the voters. There is one exception, the State of Kansas, which, since it is the home of Vice President Curtis, has shown leanings to the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

In Wisconsin, Nebraska, South Dakota and Missouri, Roosevelt today with the addition of another week's balloting shows leads that at this time would justify placing those states safely in his column.

Minnesota, Iowa and North Dakota also show Roosevelt majorities, but today they are not sufficiently large to class them other than doubtful with 1932 Democratic leanings.

Such a thing as the corn belt going solidly Democratic is not impossible. It has been done before. In 1912 every one of these eight states, except Minnesota, which went Bull Moose, gave its electoral vote to Woodrow Wilson. Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and North Dakota repeated that performance in 1916.

FORMER VOTES RECALLED

Wisconsin, while not going Democratic, did desert the Republican ticket when it gave its electoral vote to LaFollette in 1924.

Forty years ago, in 1892, Grover Cleveland carried Wisconsin. Missouri went Democratic three times in a row in 1892, 1896 and 1900. Nebraska and South Dakota were on the Democratic side in 1896.

The voters of today in large measure are the voters of 1912 and 1916 and the sons and grandsons and daughters and granddaughters of the voters of the nineties. The old proverb of "Like Father Like Son" may find itself exemplified in the political situation in the Middle West this year.

Heel Blister Causes Death of Woman

An infection that developed from a shoe rubbing the right heel caused the death of Mrs. Anna Hays, 25, of 1221 Ridge avenue, North Side, in Allegheny General Hospital yesterday. The blister developed July 24, according to the report to the Coroner.

HOOVER-ROOSEVELT POLL RETURNS

Presidential Trend by States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

How Women, Men Vote

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The tabulation to date of post card ballots in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States follows. The table by states divides the returns as between the Republican and Democratic nominees and sub divides them as between men and women supporters of each. It also shows the potential electoral vote for each candidate.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- BY SALLY MARTIN

Some People Do Not Care for Anybody But Themselves

Jerry dates her, but if he meets her on the street he "doesn't choose" to know her—

And now he's "stood her up" on a date.

He criticizes even her most decent friends, and calls them "fast," but he goes on wild parties himself.

So Marianne wants to know how we'd figure a guy like that: and how'll she act, she asks us, when she meets him?

Have you any ideas? Then bring 'em on!

Dear Sally Martin:

I've read your articles a lot, and learned a lot from them, but now I find myself at a loss, for there is one problem you haven't seemed to have. You have told a good many girls "how to win him back" if he was worth winning, but what I want to know is how to call "quits" gracefully.

Last night I received my first "stand-up," a bitter pill for any girl to take. After having been tickled pink some days ago by receiving an invitation to a formal dinner dance by an exclusive girls' club, imagine my disappointment when at the eleventh hour, Jerry, who was to take me, telephoned my home and left a message that he would not be able to go. So, after having bought a charming new ensemble and indulged in many anticipations, I was an absentee at this dance, where more than 200 of my friends were enjoying themselves.

I've known Jerry for 18 months. He has favored me with dozens of invitations. Our dates have always been free from drinking, petting and wildness, and he has told my friends repeatedly that he enjoyed my company.

A JEALOUS FELLOW

But in public he "does not choose" to know me. If I were cheap, or had told him I was crazy about him, I might see through that; but that isn't true. I have never chased him, or told him that I loved him.

When other boys are thoughtful enough to talk to me and ask to escort me home, he openly shows his jealousy, though he is not courteous enough himself to show me those attentions. Often I have taken this as a signal to call "quits," and twice I've given him the air, but both times he came back.

He disapproves of the occasional "cig" that I smoke. He brands my friendliness toward other boys as "vampish." He criticizes very decent fellows as being "too fast" for me. And then—he attends wild parties, drinks, and takes out other girls, who not only smoke and vamp, but have hot "reps" for petting and drinking.

He always treated me as a lady, and we had fun together, but last night was the last straw. I don't blame him entirely, for he's been chased and flattered so by girls that he's become egotistical, and seems to think they all want to marry him.

HURT ENOUGH

I've had happy hours with him, but they don't make up for the hurts I've had from his whims; so now I want to know how to make him realize I'm calling it "over"—with no regrets.

Can you analyze him? How would you interpret his attitude toward me? I know I'll meet him constantly. How'll I act when I do? How'll I squelch him if he phones?

MARIANNE.

You're a wise little girl to want to call it "over," honey. For if you didn't you'd probably always get just such hurts as you've already had.

How would I "interpret" him? Just as you have. He's just a conceited young pup who thinks he owns the earth, and who thinks of no one but himself—and that's a might poor kind of human to take seriously, be it man or woman.

What'll you do if he phones, or when you meet him? If he phones, you're all dated up the next six months and can't find time to see him. When you meet him, be pleasant and casual—but still busy.

'SHIPS THAT PASS—' -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"—— Sails that drift at night—
Together on the deep,
Seen only where they cross the light—"

The cutter in the dark blue and grey presses forward sturdily on his course. There are things to do in the world, ports to call on, old friends to trade with—and new ports and friends to see.

The graceful little sloop spreads a spotless white canvas, speeds on her path like a witch, showing colors in her cheeks and lips and eyes, demure, bent upon feminine duties and feminine cargo and pretty ports of call.

But what-ho, on the really wet water a boat may salute another ship she likes the looks of, may fly a "ship ahoy—and whither bound?" And alas and alackaday, on shore the ships we speak of that pass with clinging glances, any other but a tramp ship may not hail the other without an introduction.

The world is afraid of one another—and well it might be these days of horrific front pages. But what a pity it must be so!

Have you not passed a heavy-duty craft, Mamselle, whose look you liked, oh so well, whose pleasures and delights and moods you could swear were akin to your own? And gone on—with but a suppressed, friendly meeting of eyes?

The Ships That Pass. And must pass on. What lost good friends sometimes.

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Greeting

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Frequently my fiance and I visit some friends of his who are older than we are . . and it usually happens that Mr. Blank greets us at the door and takes us inside, as Mrs. Blank is upstairs. In a short time she comes down to the living room and I would like to know if I'm supposed to rise and greet her. We aren't old friends and as she is very correct in everything she does, I wondered if she noticed that I didn't rise to greet her when she comes into the room. (She is about 38 with a girl in junior college almost as old as I am, so I didn't think it necessary.)

2. I don't like to say "I am very pleased to have met you, Mrs. Blank." Isn't there anything that is just as correct and that sounds less stilted?

M.

1. Do rise to greet your hostess when she enters the room. This is a gracious and polite tribute that we should not omit. The fact that this friend is older than you, and the fact too that she has a daughter almost your age give even more of a reason why you should not omit this social amenity. As a matter af fact, when we are in doubt as to whether or not we should arise, it is—better to err on the side of rising, to show politeness and social grace, than it is not to rise.

Since this woman is punctilious in her social point of view, you should be especially careful about this sort of social compliment and respect. You won't be sorry, dear friend, if you do this sort of thing, and you may be sorry if you don't.

2. I agree with you that very often the word "pleased," charming enough 'tis true in itself, if often somewhat awkward to say. For myself I very much prefer the high-hearted word "happy." Try this, next time, and see if you don't prefer it too. "I am so hapy to have met you, Mrs. Thompson," or try too, "It has been such a pleasure to have met you, Mrs. Robinson," or, "It has been a special pleasure to have met you, Mrs. Jameson," or, for some occasions, "I have so much enjoyed our talk together, Mr. Allen."

Eating Chicken

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to eat chicken with your fingers in company, or in public eating places? It has been pointed out to me as being a breach of etiquette. So I am asking you to settle this question for me, if you will.

FRANK.

The "pointer out" was correct, sir. We just mustn't eat chicken in our fingers in company or in public eating places . . . not, that is, if we have any pride about our dining habits. I'm sure you will agree with me that this doesn't give a good impression; that it is an unpleasant operation to watch; that it soils our fingers, then our fingers soil our napkins. And all the time, really, we can, with a little care and persistence, get the chicken off the bone with our knives and forks. And in the meantime we can be "neat and tidy" eaters and can carry on our conversation in a civilized manner . . . a thing we can't do when we are gnawing bones.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Dangerous Double

There is no sounder principle in considering a Penalty Double at Contract Bridge than to do so only when you hold a trump trick, even though the contract is a Slam contract and the player holds considerable honor strength, but the bidding discloses freakish distribution.

A few days ago, in a New York bridge club, I watched the play of the hand below:

North—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North:
♠ A J 10 4
♡ A 10 8 7 4 3

West:
♠ 9 5 2
♡ 6
◇ 9 7 6 4 3
♣ J 9 7 2

East:
♠ K Q 7 6 3
♡ 9 2
◇ A K Q 10 8 2

South:
♠ 8
♡ K Q J 5
◇ J 5
♣ A Q 10 8 6 5

North opened the bidding with one heart, expecting later, if the opportunity presented itself, to show also his biddable spade suit. East overcalled with two spades, and South responded with four hearts. North now bid six hearts, after West's pass, and East, with a fairly strong two-suiter, did not feel strong enough to bid seven diamonds, but elected instead to double the six heart contract. This was passed around to North, who now felt that he could read East's Jump Overcall and subsequent Double.

Obviously, East held a two-suited hand in spades and diamonds, and equally obviously South's Jump to four hearts was predicated upon honor strength as well as strong trump support. If, as North hoped, South held a club suit as strong as Ace-Queen and not more than one spade, seven could be made, but, engaging in a little mental arithmetic, North realized that a redoubled contract of six hearts was more profitable than an undoubled contract of seven hearts. East's Double had furnished him the opportunity for playing for 12 tricks and making a larger profit than he could make by playing for 13. Therefore, he immediately redoubled. This was passed all around, and East opened the King of diamonds, which was ruffed by the Declarer. The result is self-evident. North, of course, made all the tricks.

When the score was being set down, East, seeking to save something from the wreck, remarked to his partner that they had stopped the opponents from bidding a Grand Slam. That was quite true, but it would have been cheaper for East and West if North had bid and made his Grand Slam, if he had been permitted to play the contract undoubled. After the Redouble of the contract of six hearts by North, East unquestionably should have bid seven diamonds, and while North, no doubt, now would have bid the Grand Slam in hearts, East, if wise, would have permitted it to be played undoubled.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 ♣	2 ◇	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

What should West lead, holding:

♠ K 9 8 7 ♡ J 6 4 2 ◇ 8 6 ♣ K Q 3

Answer—Eight of diamonds. West's holdings in the other three suits are of such a nature that it is better if the opponents lead them first. The lead of partner's suit is clearly indicated.

Toys for Kiddies

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

"What do you think Annette did this morning?" There were several exclamation points in the mother's voice and flashes of outraged justice in her eyes. Of course, we had no way of knowing what Annette did. "She squeezed all the toothpaste out of the tube," continued the mother indignantly, "and smeared it all over the bathroom!"

Annette is 3, inquisitive and very much alive. Annette wants to touch, to manipulate. It was quite easy to sense the charm that centered around a tube she could pinch and see a nice pink ribbon come out of. Then followed naturally the urge to do something with that pink ribbon.

BUT—if Annette's home had been properly equipped with TOYS or play materials with which she might have experimented, the mother quite properly could have demanded that she leave the toothpaste on the shelf where it belonged, and used it only for its intended purpose. In this case such a demand would have been unjustified, for Annette has no outlet for her very normal desire to mould and touch and build, except when she makes that outlet with some such illegitimate material as toothpaste.

The toddler, in particular, needs play materials with which he can experiment, materials such as sand, clay, paints or crayons upon which he can impress his will. He can turn wet sand or clay into definite shapes. He can see white paper take on a picture of a red barn, or whatever picture enters his young mind.

He is at the age of "turn into." The toddler gets his biggest sense of mastery when he makes one thing turn into something else, when he uses his own hands to manipulate materials—and if he has no legitimate play materials, he will find for his purpose materials that are not legitimate.

Toddlers are indeed "home wreckers" unless provision is made for their needs; but the home that has a slide in its back yard won't know the shabbiness of a davenport used as a slide; and the little one that has paints and a brush with which to freshen up a doll cupboard won't smear up the bathroom with toothpaste.

Garden Bouquet Quilt-Block 3-Lily of the Valley

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Garden Bouquet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a stamped, addressed envelope to Nancy Page in care of this paper.

"It's no wonder the birds are gathering at this vase. Who wouldn't when they had a flower as pretty as the lily of the valley close at hand?" In a way this remark reflected the sentiment of all members of the Nancy Page Quilt Club.

They had made the first complete block during the past week. It consisted of a lower triangle with the pieced urn, the upper triangle with its appliqued tulip, its saucy and its meek bird. Now they were ready for the second flower. On the block they had already made the pieced lower half or urn, the upper white triangle was seamed on and the birds were appliqued. All that remained was the appliqueing of the flowers. They took the pattern as given in today's paper and traced it lightly in place on the white triangle. Then they laid the paper pattern over a piece of lightweight cardboard and traced it again. Then they pasted the paper pattern with its directions into the Nancy Page Quilt Scrap Book. Next they cut the pasteboard pattern into its pieces. Each lily is like its neighbor, so only one paper pattern needed to be cut, although four cloth lilies were made.

In cutting these, as in cutting the leaves, a quarter-inch seam allowance was made on all sides. This gave material for turning under. The stem was made from green bias tape. Had the members not used that they would have cut the green material, fast color and the same as used for the leaves, into a bias strip, twice as wide as the pattern. Then the raw edges would have been turned until they met and basted and pressed in place.

The lilies overlapped one another and the stem, as shown in the picture and as indicated by the dotted line.

In choosing the material for the lily a green and white polka dotted material may be used, or a green ground sprigged with white, or a white sprigged with green. In any case the pattern should be small.

In appliqueing the piece after the edges have been turned, basted and pressed use a fine, slanting invisible hemming stitch or if desired, but not recommended, a buttonhole stitch. In that case raw edges do not have to be turned under and the pieces are cut the size given.

Of course, the whole quilt may be worked in outline stitch, using fast color embroidery cotton. Or the pattern may be traced, filled in with colored crayons and then pressed with a hot iron. This sets the crayon color in to the material. It is a quick method, but not as pretty in the final result as the applique.

BACK BLOCKS SUPPLIED

In the event you have missed any of the Garden Bouquet Quilt blocks previously published in this paper, please send 10 cents for each block missing. Also enclose stamped, addressed envelope. Address Nancy Page, care of this paper.

Household Hints

Silk will look like new if a teaspoonful of methylated spirit is added to each pint of the rinsing water.

Silks and thin materials should be pressed on a blanket or sheet; woolens and heavy fabrics must be pressed on a board.

Bamboo furniture can be freshened up by being thoroughly cleaned with a damp cloth, then, when quite dry, given a coating of clear varnish.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

To Treat Convulsions Cause Must Be Known

"My child suffers from epilepsy," someone just wrote me. "I have had him to several doctors and he has received treatment for many years with little benefit. Is there anything that I can do for him?"

Dr. Copeland

I receive many letters like this. Some of them indicate unnecessary fear.

Epilepsy, or "convulsions," as the trouble is commonly called, is regularly encountered among infants and young children. Its symptoms are terrifying to the mother. Yet sometimes the convulsions are ignored and not considered as anything unusual. They are regarded merely as being caused by an "upset stomach." This attitude is likely to be found in the family where others had convulsions in childhood.

Convulsions may be traced to various disturbances. If the child has an "organic" cause, such as meningitis, hemmorrhage or tumor of the brain, abscess of the brain, or some other important disorder, the trouble is serious and cannot be regarded as a mild disturbance.

However, the convulsions may be of the functional type and in that event, unpleasant as it is, the attack need not cause undue alarm. In such a case the symptoms may be attributed to a disturbance in the digestive tract. An enema will bring speedy relief.

In other cases, the convulsions may be brought about by the absorption of certain poisons which form within the body. These poisons are caused by the intestines or kidneys. It is rather a common symptom in disorders of the kidneys and liver.

Convulsions are sometimes encountered in children suffering from malnutrition. When the undernourishment is corrected and the child is given the proper diet and treatment, the tendency to convulsions disappears speedily.

Bear in mind that if your child suffers from convulsions, it is necessary to have a complete physical examination by a doctor. This examination is important. Treatment to be of any value, can be given only when the cause of the convulsions is known. Remember that if the attacks are repeated and become more and more severe and prolonged, the child requires careful medical attention.

In what I have said, I do not refer to the form of spasm seen in children who are subject to "tantrums." These children are irritable, become easily excited, get blue in the face, and may become limp or stiff. These performances can be traced to neurotic tendencies and can only be cured by improvement in the child's training and behavior.

When the child has a convulsion do not lose your head. Call a physician and while he is on the way, keep the child as quiet as possible. Avoid all unnecessary noises and excitement.

Place the child in a hot tub, trying the heat on your elbow first to make sure that the water is not scalding. Apply cold ice-packs to the head.

Do not give any medicines or "tonics" unless they have been prescribed by your physician. Leave the medication to him.

Convulsions that are neglected and are allowed to occur repeatedly, are a menace to the health and future of your child. Much unnecessary suffering and unhappiness can be avoided by early and immediate attention.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Health-wealth banks up beauty riches. No girl can look well if she feels mean, wants to weep, has nerves, doesn't sleep, or doesn't sit down to a good meal with a feeling that the commissary department of the home is a swell institution. All healthy women aren't beautiful, of course, but all really beautiful women must possess health, because vitality supplies animation, tints the cheeks, reddens the lips, shines up the soul windows, puts everything hunky-dory and makes life joyous. So eat wisely, bathe daily, breathe deeply, get eight hours of restful sleep, and learn to cast worries to the winds.

Woman does a lot of crowing because she chucked the cast-iron corset, detached herself from pounds of factory hair, refused to choke herself to death with tight, high collars, stopped wearing feathers in her hats and cast off a heavy load of petticoats. But she is still hobbling along on spiked heels that make her back ache and puts hard knots in her nervous system. She packs here poor little hoofs in shoes that grow corns, ingrowing nails, callouses and bunions, and continues to consider herself a civilized and sound-minded person. Which inclines one to raucous laughter.

HELP FOR BOY DRIFTERS ASKED

Speaking at a luncheon gathering of civic and social workers in Kaufmann's yesterday, Miss Bertha McCall, former Pittsburgher and acting director of the National Travelers' Aid Society, appealed for action to meet the problem of the vagrant boy.

Stressing the rapid increase of boys "on the loose" throughout the country, an increase which has already made obsolete statistics compiled last May, Miss McCall advocated centralization of community forces. The problem, she said, is threefold: keeping boys from leaving home, caring for hitch-hikers and handling the returned prodigals.

A national "steering" committee has been formed which will assist communities with the problem, Miss McCall said.

JAILED SINCE JUNE; FREED

Andrew Woods, 20, of 700 North avenue, a soda clerk, was free today of a robbery charge, after having been in jail since June 19 waiting for a jury trial. He was acquitted after a short hearing before Visiting Judge Thomas Bailey, of Huntingdon County.

The indictment charged he had robbed George Swackhamer, a taxi driver, of $8 January 10. Swackhamer, the only state witness, said Woods and another youth hailed his cab and asked to be driven to the Pitt Stadium at 2 a. m. January 20. There he said they pointed a gun at him and robbed him.

He said he recognized Woods in the street June 19 and caused his arrest. Woods denied the charge and offered several character witnesses.

VALENTINE :-: Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love :-: By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Val Is Depressed After Talk With Millie and Yearns To Return Home

CHAPTER XVIII.

Val looked around the strange, large room It had two large windows, twin beds, of oak, with austere crocheted white coverlets, red velvet hangings at the windows, straight, carved oak chairs, an immense carved oak chest and a dresser.

The walls were white, the floors dark oak. Behind the beds there was a wall hanging of dull tapestry. The wall brackets were of iron, with simulated candles.

It was as unlike Millie as anything could be imagined.

Val began to take off her clothes, feeling more than a little homesick.

Millie rapped, came in wearing a trailing negligee of frosty pinkish satin, heavily encrusted with a dark, heavy lace. In the loose garment she looked more like the old Millie . . . except that the old Millie had never worn pink.

She sat on one of the beds, embraced Val.

"It will take us years to catch up," she said.

Val smiled, but she didn't know what to say. After 12 years' absence nothing seems important enough to say . . . except, perhaps, getting married.

"Joe Carey and I. But of course Aunt Julia wrote you. We're going to be married."

Millie laughed, the old bubbling lovely laugh. "Of course she did. Think of it! My baby! Now that alone will keep us talking a year."

"We'll be married in about six months!"

"My precious infant! Of course! I'd forgotten. You'll need so much. I'll take you shopping. I have ideas about your clothes . . . you will let me? Don't look troubled. I can afford it . . . Vincent . . . Of course you know that Vincent and I are going to be married, too?"

"I thought so. I thought he lived here first."

ASKS ABOUT JIM

"Darling, he does. It's my house, all in my name. But he has his room here. It's quite all right, of course. You see, Vincent has a wife who WON'T divorce him—simply won't. So when I met Vincent, and he fell in love with me why naturally he wanted to take care of me, because I only had a little, from my few stage engagements—really, there's nothing doing in my line, and as you know what little I had after your father died was gone long ago—before I sent you to your aunt's, in fact so—"

Val listened, feeling more and more troubled.

"But I don't know what happened to Jim," she said. "You never told me."

"Poor Jim! Darling, I always wanted to tell you, because of course I knew you loved him, too. I'll always love the memory of those happy days. You know that Jim went to sea, and well, I was lonely, and really almost destitute. I had to make other plans.

"Well, Jim and I just drifted apart . . . just drifted apart . . . I went to Honolulu, and Jim was off on a hopeless long trip. I always thought I'd meet him again, but I never did. Poor Jim. I heard later . . . just a couple of years ago that he had gone back to his wife, and was very happy to hear it, because she was really his type, just a little homebody, and he would never have been happy with a woman like me—"

NIGHT CLUB HOSTESS

Millie spread her hands—indicated the large, luxurious room, her expensive negligee. Smiled, a little wistfully at Val who watched her round-eyed, not quite understanding.

"But you were happy with him. We were all happy!"

"Darling! Of course! Our little family picnic in the funny apartment we all three had together. But that was just a silly adventure for all of us. I felt sorry for poor, lonely Jim, and so I kept house, and mothered you both—"

Val stared. She couldn't understand it.

"And when I couldn't stand it any longer—really couldn't afford it any longer, for Jim hardly kept up his end, and I had you to think of, and my own life to live, why naturally I had to tell him, and so I sent you to Julia . . . she HAS been good to you, dear?"

"Of course."

"Yes, I knew she would. That was another thing. I felt you would have more of a home with her than you could with me. My life has been so strange, and ruffled. My dear, being a night club hostess, glamorous as it may seem—"

"It doesn't seem glamorous. I can't imagine you doing it!"

Millie stared at her daughter. Then she laughed. "No? Kiss me! You're the same contrary little thing you always were. Never mind. It doesn't matter. I don't do it any more. I'm just a home-body now!"

Val said, "I don't know anything about what you did all those years. Aunt Julia never said anything, and I—"

"She didn't? She never told you anything about me?"

"No. Millie, where were you a night club hostess?"

"You funny child! Oh—different places. A woman alone . . . Valentine, you must never be alone, do you hear me? I want you to marry."

VAL UNCOMFORTABLE

"I am! I'm going to marry Joe; I told you about Joe. Joe's—"

"Yes, dear. I know. I want you to marry, darling, and be very careful about the people you meet. A girl can't be too careful. You'll meet some wonderful men here. The girls . . . well, I'll talk about the girls some other time.

"The girls aren't just what I . . . what I'd like if I were . . . well, in my position Val, to be perfectly frank, why we really don't go out in society on account of Vincent's wife, but we have some lovely times, dear. You'll be happy with us. That is just what I always wanted . . . my lovely new home . . . my dear Vincent, and you!"

Val felt uncomfortable, more and more uncomfortable. "Vincent's awful nice," she said, just to be saying something.

"Now THERE, you show your judgment. Vincent, darling, is a wonderful man. He will be very sweet to you. Very generous. You'll see. He'll buy out the town for you."

"But—I—I couldn't possibly let him. Why should he? I'd feel very funny. I'd much rather not, Millie—really—"

"Now, darling, you must let him have his fun. He's been looking forward to this. You see, he has a daughter and she . . . No, I don't think I can describe her. But I must! Well, she is an intellectual, like her mother, and she wears mannish clothes and flat heels, and her hair is pink—not red, pink, and she's built like a feather pillow except that she has arms and legs like a gorilla, and she snubs Vincent, the poor sweet, because he doesn't know what she's talking about and I give you my word, nobody could! So you're just what he always dreamed of—just what my daughter WOULD be, he said. You ARE lovely, Val, dear! And of course it will be fun for him to dress you up and give you things which he never could give to his Cornelia . . . Cornelia! The name is really enough, now, isn't it?"

"I think it's sort of pretty—the name I mean.

"Do you, darling? Well, perhap! But she isn't, and you are. Kiss me good-night. I must go. You will be comfortable here? Don't you love the room? It's real Spanish. Not a false note. The entire house, my dear, is Spanish. Not a thing in it that isn't except some Mexican glass, and I did get one or two pieces of Italian pottery by mistake, and then I kept them anyway, though I may get rid of them. There isn't a place in Santa Barbara, even the millionaire's homes, that is a bit more authentic."

Val looked around the room after Millie had gone. Millie in an authentic Spanish house . . . saying that she just felt sorry for Jim . . . used to mother her and Jim . . . and Jim's wife . . . nobody ever said anything about that before.

"Oh, I wish she hadn't told me!"

Val pressed her cold hands over her tired eyes. Sat on one of the authentic Spanish beds, lost in troubled thought.

What would Aunt Julia say to all this?

And, oh dear, how long did she have to stay?

Synopsis

Valentine Macfarlane is practically deserted at the age of 8 by her gay, widowed mother, Millie. Val is left with a man-hating maiden aunt, Julia Macfarlane. Julia clings to the child despite Millie's occasional pleas for her return. Julia says Millie is not a fit guardian. Valentine becomes infatuated with Lester Sherwood, but they quarrel. She then is engaged to marry the more sedate Joe Carey. Joe leaves for Minneapolis, where he has a position as architect. Aunt Julia is opposed to the match and decides it is time for Millie to re-enter her daughter's life. Val goes to Santa Barbara, where she finds Millie in a luxurious home owned by a man named Vincent.

Now Go On

"I wish she hadn't told me," thought Val.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Again Finds Evidence of Hugh's Devotion

Whether Katherine's request was based upon my need of something to do to make me forget the departure of the children, or whether I really was needed in the sick room, I never have been able to determine, but nothing could have so effectively jolted me from my absorption in the departing cavalcade as her commission to aid Hugh Grantland in caring for the two sick men.

"Where's Dickey?" I thought for a horrified instant that I had uttered the words, but the next instant I realized thankfully that only in my brain had that uneasy query sounded. I wondered if Katherine had surmised what question I was mentally asking, when she abruptly paused in her rapid walk toward the kitchen and, turning, spoke apologetically.

"I wouldn't ask you if I could manage any other way," she said, but, as you can imagine, we are rather short-handed with Harry away, and Dicky has gone down to the hospital to see about having my first patient taken down there. He probably won't be back for an hour, so I simply have to call on you."

I pulled myself together and put aside my qualms. I also resolved to toss subterfuge away when talking to Katherine.

"That's my only reason for existence, in the present emergency," I told her, smiling. "Mother Graham is taking care of Faith, and Lillian has removed all my other responsibilities, so I am at your service. But there is one thing I want you do for me. You probably can guess what it is, for you know that Dicky—"

ENTERS LIBRARY

"Sees red whenever Hugh is within a mile of you," she interrupted, with a kindly grin, as I hesitated. "Yes, darling, I know all about it, and I'll promise to get you out of the trenches before Christmas. I'll relieve you long before there's a chance of Dicky getting back; so run along now, and don't look so fearful. Hugh won't eat you, although he'd probably like to."

She wrinkled her nose at me and turned back again towards the kitchen, while I, feeling a little as if I were going to my execution, went on to the library.

The little study, flooded with sunlight, held such homely peace and cheerfulness that I found it difficult to credit the remembrance of the tense, melodramatic scene which I had witnessed there but a few hours before, when Lee Chow, investigating the contents of Marion's mysterious box, had received into his finger the poison of a concealed dart.

The library adjoining was equally restful, and the two sick men appeared to be sleeping. In the hurried half hour following the collapse of Lee Chow, his old henchman, convalescing from wounds received at the hands of his murderous countrymen while they were besieging the farmhouse, had been transferred to the small study, giving Lee Chow the larger library.

A BELL OF WARNING

Hugh was sitting in a big chair between the two rooms, patiently trying to perform the impossible feat of keeping his eyes focused upon both patients at the same time. Katherine had told me not to knock, and as the door swung open he sprang to his feet and came across the room to meet me.

He had replaced his shoes with moccasins, and I noticed that his footsteps were as noiseless as those of any Indian. He did not give me any signal for silence, but I made my voice an almost inaudible murmur.

"Katherine asked me to come in to help you," I said, looking up at him, and again I felt as if candles had suddenly been lighted far back in his eyes.

"Unfortunately, I do not need any help just now," he said, smiling. "The men are both sleeping, if Lee Chow's condition may be called sleep. I hope it is only that. I haven't anything to do except watch, but—will you have to go away because of that?"

Something indefinable in his voice and manner rang a little bell of warning deep in my heart. He did not know it himself, but I was afraid that he was not going to be able to preserve the calm, brotherly attitude with which he had been able for years to camouflage his real feeling for me. Confused, apprehensive, I parried his question perversely.

"I am afraid I have no choice," I said hurriedly. "Katherine told me I must come here

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

At the meeting one week from today the members of the Washington Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph - Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club which meets at the Washington Theater, in Washington, will witness the presentation of the Junior Komic Club minstrels.

Betty Jane Haught, Virginia McVehil, Verna Bridges, Ethel Grinage, Gertrude McKahan, Margaret Barker, Lucille Martin, Anna Marmas, Anna Mae Beatty, Charlotte Beatty, Marion Kemp, Eva Marie Jarvis, Anna Kerns and Myrtle Sholton sang songs, while Harolde Wolfe, Alvin Bales and Betty George danced.

Mary Jane Wood, Aldine Martain, Verda Bridges, Stanley Wolfe and Billy Brownlee performed some very intricate acrobatic dances.

CAMERAPHONE LETTER

Little Betty Niedhammer, the "Official Junior Reporter" of the Cameraphone Chapter, East Liberty, sent the following letter to all of the members last week:

Dear Club Members:

Just to remind you that beginning Saturday, September 17, the Cameraphone Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, is going to put on the first of their winter stage shows, games and contests for the members.

I know that Manager Earl Roeser will welcome all suggestions that any member or members' parents might make for the betterment of the club.

Any particular games that you would like to play at these meetings, any particular contest that you would like to participate in, any special kind of stage entertainment you would enjoy, if told to Mr. Roeser, I am sure he'll do all in his power to satisfy you.

There will be many surprises in store for you and now that school has started I know that you'll look forward to these Saturday morning meetings.

Let's surprise Manager Roeser. If every member who attends the meeting on Saturday, September 17, will bring along just one boy or girl who is not a member, and enroll this boy or girl in the Cameraphone Chapwe'll have the largest membership in the East End. And I know that if we do this for Mr. Roeser that he'll do something real nice for us in return.

Here's another thing that I'd like to ask members to do. Every day be sure to wear your Junior Komic Club pin. You'd be surprised how many little boys and girls you'll meet in different parts of the city who are members and who would like to play or talk with you, but if you don't wear your badge how are they to know that they are fellow members of your club, or, how will you know they belong to the Junior Komic Club. So, lets see how many boys and girls around this section of the city are members. Wear your Komic Club pin!

Now don't forget, each member is to bring one new member to the meeting on Saturday, September 17.

Your "Official Junior Reporter,"

Betty Niedhammer.

There's nothing to be added to the above letter. Let every boy and girl who is a member of the Junior Komic Club bring to his or her chapter next Saturday, one new member. And every boy and girl who is a member should wear the Junior Komic Club emblem at all times.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

Congratulations to the following boys and girls all members of the Sun-Telegraph Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club who are celebrating their birthdays today:

Belmar—Dave Jeffery, George Wisong, Margaret Scholler, Marion Rodgers.

Manor — Judson Richman, Myrean Rosenblum, Kemp Griffen, Cecil Becker, Donald O'Connor, Pauline Shinman.

Enright—Ross Jones.

Schenley—Anna Rapine, Minnie Liepack.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

What have you ever done for any orphaned child?

There must be some such unfortunate in your neighborhood to whom you might play the role of a good fellow.

If you are a man you might help a little bit in filling the place of a father to some lad in giving him occasional good times.

If a woman, there are many things you might do for a motherless girl.

Not necessarily financial expenditure is needed to befriend the boy or girl who has lost both parents.

But even if a little money should be needed, the amount would not be large to provide wholesome amusement once in a while for the child.

Companionship does not cost anything in dollars and cents.

Sometimes that is harder to give than to put your hand in your pocket for a dime or a dollar.

You need not encourage a begging attitude on the part of a child.

It would not help a child a bit to think it could get something for nothing from you.

That isn't the idea at all.

To feel that someone is interested and would like to do if it were possible, and that person does add occasional unexpected pleasure, is comforting to a child.

NO I'M NOT WORRIED. BUT ON THE OTHER HAND I SHOULD LET AN AMATEUR MARKSMAN LIKE SAM BUNGLE, IN EFFECT, SHOOT MILLIONAIRE RELATIVES OFF MY FRONT PORCH?
WELL GEORGE THAT PAIR DIDN'T NEED MUCH COAXING TO LEAVE HERE. ESPECIALLY MARGY.
WE FED GUMBO WHEN ALL HE HAD WAS A VISITING LIST OF RELATIVES WHO WOULDN'T OPEN THE DOOR FOR HIM. NOW THAT HE HAS MONEY...MILLIONS.. HE'S A SOCIAL LION.
BEING SOCIALLY PROMINENT AMONG THE BUNGLES IS MY IDEA OF NOTHING. I'LL TELL MARGY SO TOO.
THERE IS NO JUSTICE! I'VE TAKEN A LOT OF TERRIBLE BEATINGS FROM MY RELATIVES BUT THIS AFFAIR PROVES THAT WHAT I WENT THROUGH WAS ONLY THE PRELIMINARIES TO THE MAIN GO.

It Was the Only Sensible Thing to Do

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

Boy Wright and Clyde Lawson were out together on a trip Sunday evening when they happened to get into a scuffle. First thing the boys knew they'd got pretty sore and were hitting in anything but fun. Boy came out of it with a bunged up hand and Clyde with a black eye. They both had too much sense to stay mad, and passed it up, like a pair of good sports. Kissed and made up did you? asked one of the local razzers. If it just hadn't been for that hand of Boy's and the bum eye of Clyde none of the local wise guys would ever have known it.

No Excuse for Apathy

The Forthcoming Election Is of Supreme Importance—Brief Comment on Local News.

The number of persons who registered Thursday for the November election is disappointingly small. It fell 10,000 short of the number who registered on the first day during the presidential campaign four years ago. The forthcoming election is of supreme importance, and it behooves every citizen to qualify to vote. There are two other registration days, September 20 and October 8.

Gen. Smedley D. Butler, who was a candidate only a few months ago for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, is calling for the election of Franklin Roosevelt. Our Republican Governor, Gifford Pinchot, Butler's political sponsor, has not yet gone that far, but he has certainly not helped President Hoover by criticizing as ''cruel and unnecessary'' the delay and red tape encountered by Pennsylvania in its effort to obtain a relief loan of $45,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

In view of the difficulty that the state is experiencing in getting federal aid, and in view of the need, Gov. Pinchot has done right in overruling the County Commissioners by approving the Steedle bill, which authorizes the County Poor Board to issue bonds for the relief of the unemployed. The authorization contains provisos which should prevent abuse of authority.

While the need for relief remains acute, signs multiply that the industrial situation is improving. Gov. William G. Conley, of West Virginia, who was a visitor in Pittsburgh yesterday, said increased steel orders were reported from the Panhandle district, that there was a better demand for coal, and small manufacturing plants were adding to their working staffs.

We shall have a better picture of the business outlook after September 15, when the Shippers' Advisory Board of the Allegheny region meets in Pittsburgh and prepares an estimate of the number of freight cars that will be required by our various industries during the next three months. This is one of the most reliable indices of the industrial prospects.

Pittsburgh's gratification over the increased demand for coal of which Gov. Conley speaks was dampened by the Interstate Commerce Commission's order, suspending until April 9, 1933, the cut proposed by the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad in freight rates for shipments of coal from Pittsburgh to certain points in Ohio. But hope revives with the later news that the commission has decided to hold another hearing on the subject on October 4.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's first finding in the Pittsburgh and West Virginia case was another of those rate decisions which are so obviously unjust that it is beyond the layman's ability to understand how they are reached. The Wheeling and Lake Erie reduced its rates 29 cents, yet when the Pittsburgh and West Virginia tried to do the same thing to meet competition it was refused permission.

The Pennylvania, New York Central and Baltimore and Ohio have shown themselves no friends of Pittsburgh in this coal rate business. They have opposed the rate reduction from Pittsburgh, but have voluntarily reduced the rates of our Ohio competitors, changing the differentials from 10 to 39 cents, and thereby diverting 3,000 tons of business a day from Pittsburgh to Ohio coal operators.

The unfairness of the railroad rates on coal, particularly for lake cargo shipments, makes it more and more desirable that Pittsburgh shall have a waterway joining it with the Great Lakes. In this connection a report just issued by an engineer who has been studying the possibilities of the upper Allegheny Valley is of interest. It offers justification for the proposed canal between the river and Lake Erie.

The engineer has told the Upper Allegheny River Improvement Association that tonnage now available warrants the immediate slackwatering of the stream to Oil City and beyond, and that potential tonnage is enormous. Pittsburgh would benefit no less than Oil City and Franklin from the river improvements and the canal for which the business interests up the river are working so energetically.

The railroads which are hamstringing Pittsburgh's coal industry with unfair rates, as well as the other public utilities, should take to heart the advice given by George B. Cortelyou, president of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, in an address to the Pennsylvania Electric Association at Bedford Springs Thursday night. He said the utilities' success depended on their ability to inspire a friendly feeling in their customers.

The current news provides new opportunities to indulge in our characteristically American fondness for superlatives in describing the institutions of Pittsburgh and the Pittsburgh district. We learn, for instance, that the monolithic columns of Ionic design which are being erected at the new building of the Mellon Institute are the largest in the world.

And then there is the George Westinghouse Bridge on the Lincoln Highway, spanning the Turtle Creek Valley, which is being dedicated this afternoon. The middle arch, 460 feet long from center to center of piers, is the largest concrete arch span in America. Both the bridge and the new Mellon Institute building have other claims upon our pride besides being merely large.

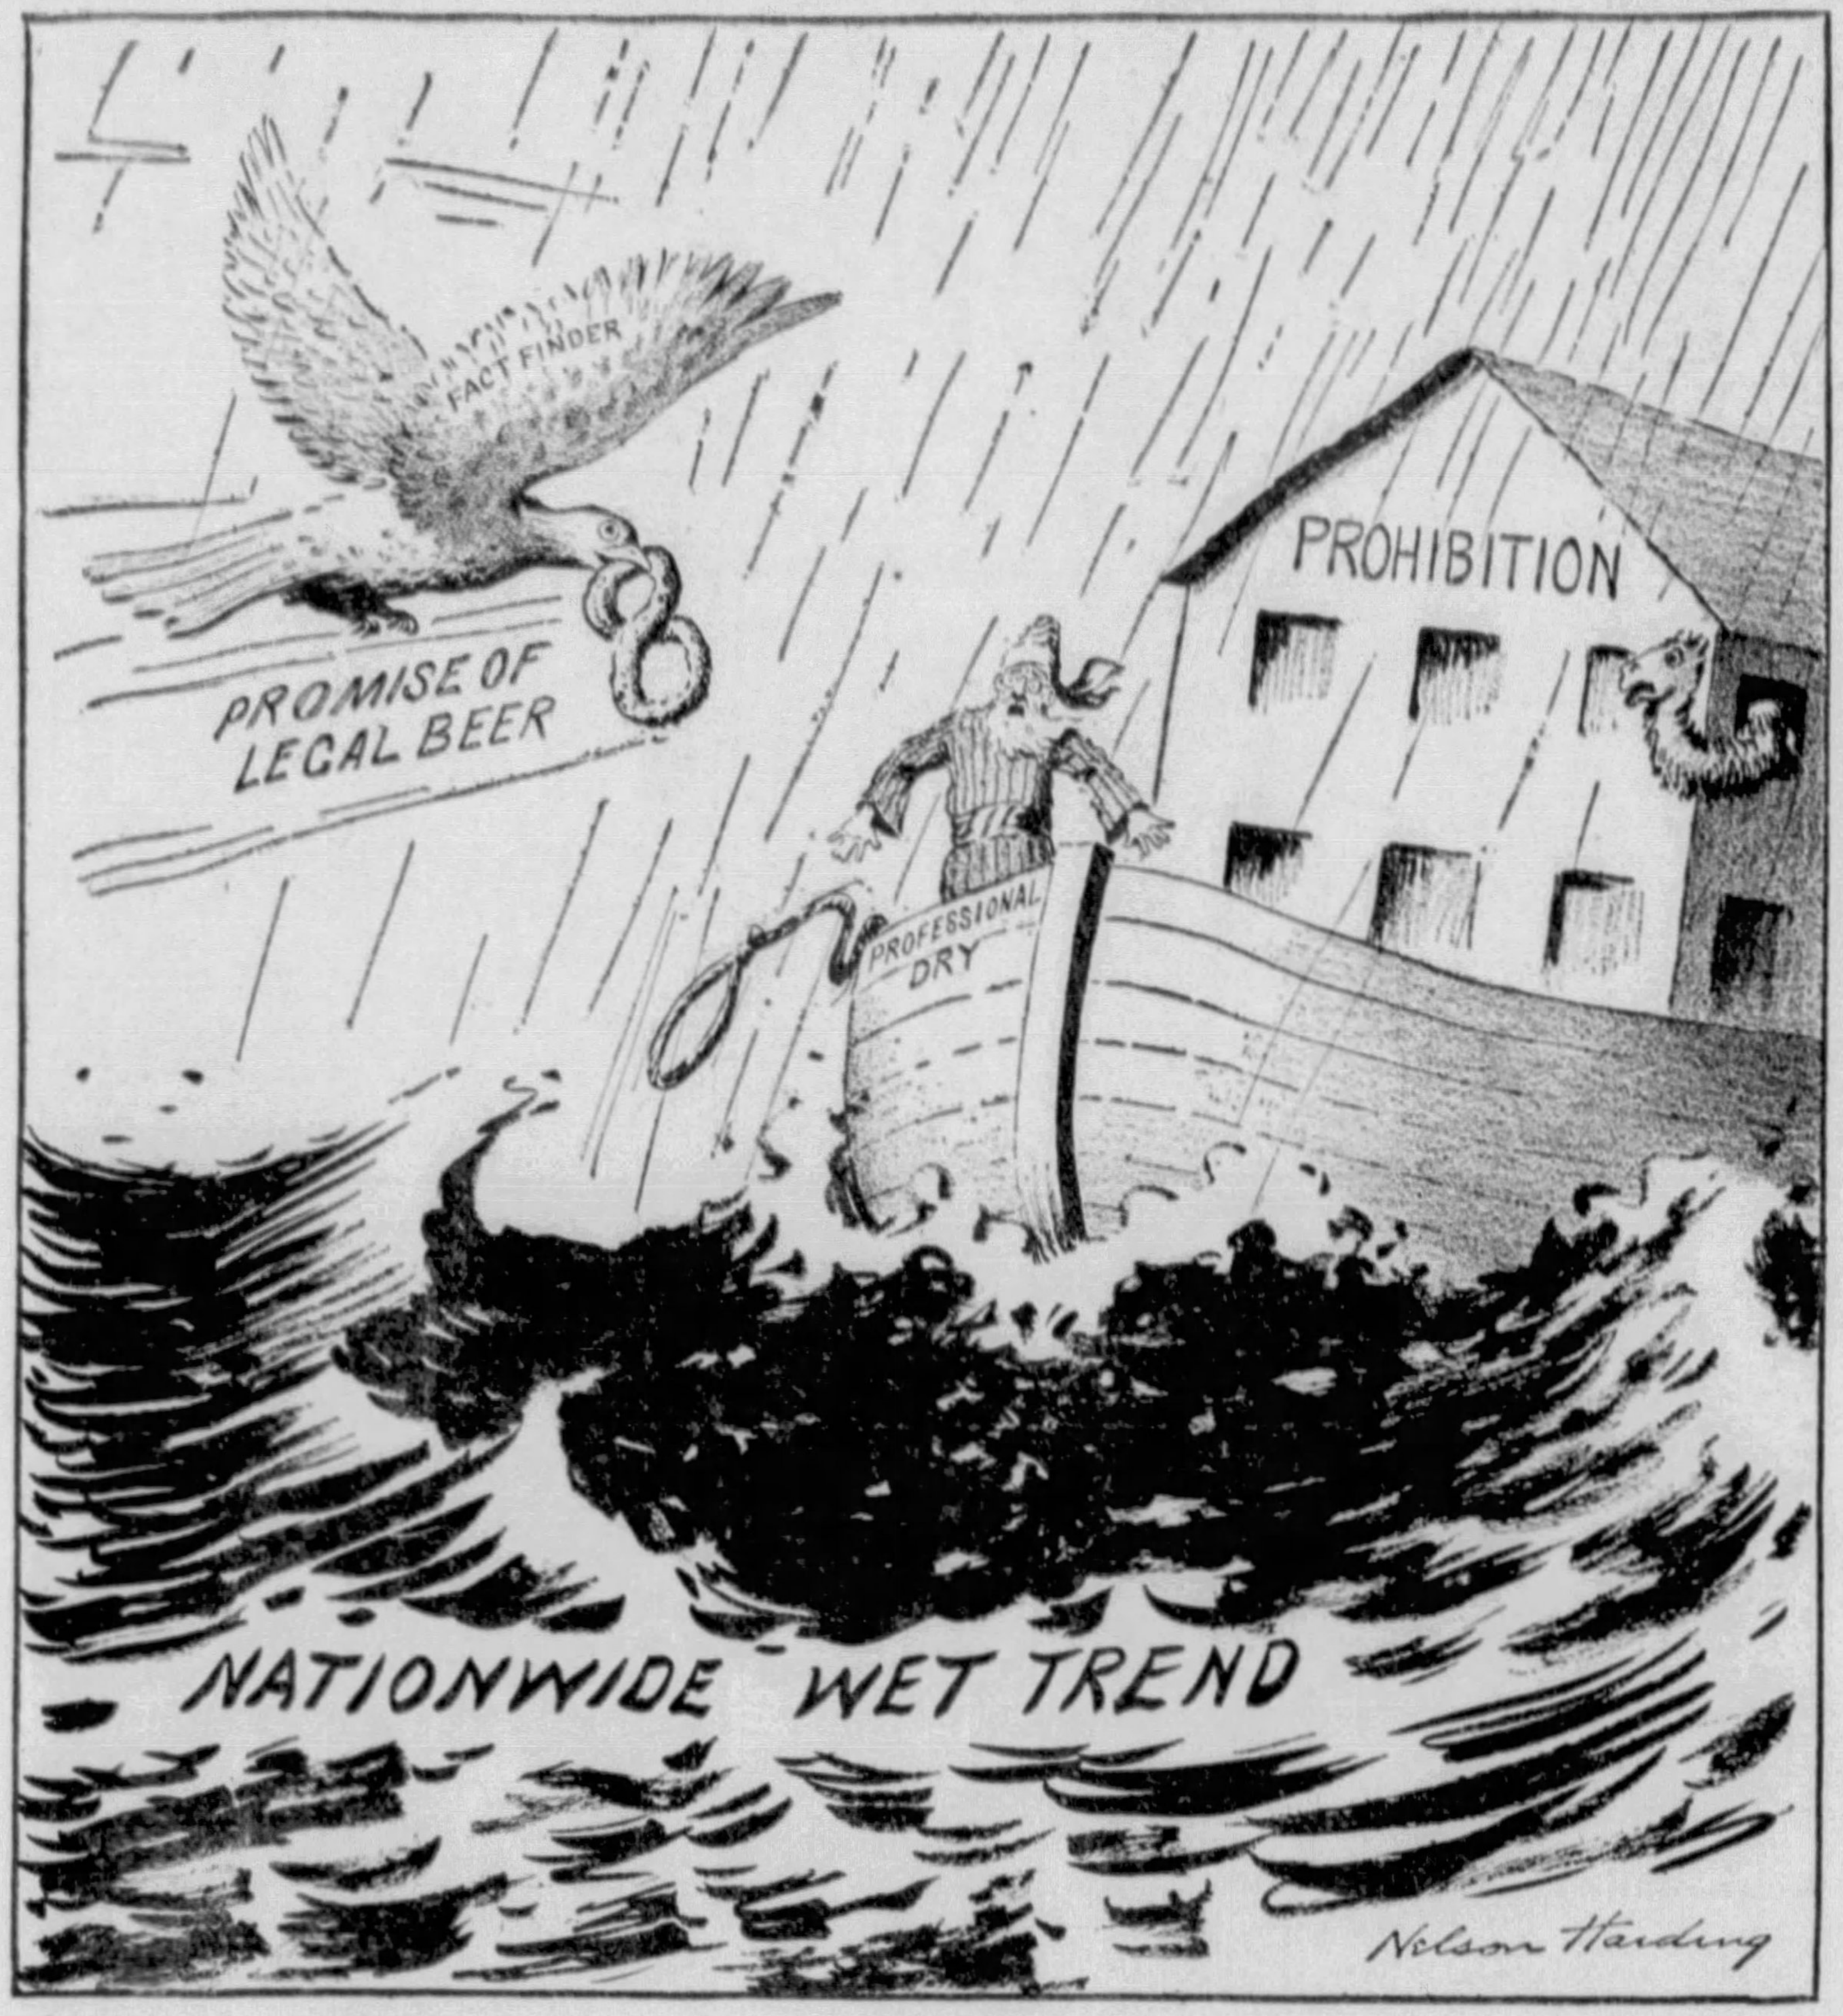
There will be another bridge celebration soon when the new approach to the Sewickley Bridge over the Ohio is opened to the public. The improvement will be appreciated by a multitude of travelers who have been forced to approach the bridge in a roundabout way, and it is appropriate that the opening should be made the occasion of pomp and ceremony, as proposed by the Sewickley Council and Board of Trade.

Apropos of bridges, there is an interesting picture of two old ones in the Gravure Section of tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. It is a panoramic view of the Point and shows the covered Manchester Bridge and the old Point Bridge. Forty-two photographs of interesting babies are among the other attractive pictures in the section.

The American Weekly, to be distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, will be notable for the initial chapters of a new serial, ''The Beret from Paris,'' by Sally Elliott. One of the important articles, of especially timely interest, is a discussion of the remark of a noted educator that American college education is largely ''hokum.''

The Dove Returns With—A Pretzel

By Nelson Harding



Our modern Noah is still afloat
Aboard his sinking Ark,
But sees no happy sign that he
Will find a place to park.

The dove brings back no olive branch
To prove Dry land is near.
Instead, a pretzel in its mouth
Gives Noah but little cheer.

Marry-Go-Round

Harvest Moon-ings

Men don't fall head-over-heels in love any more; they just wade into it carelessly and lightly—and seldom more than ankle-deep.

* * *

Women are funny. Even when a husband fusses or complains all through his meals and goes to sleep right after the dessert, his wife gets sore, if he doesn't come home for dinner. There just must be something masculine around the house to give it a finished look.

SO I GIVE TH HOUSE A FINISHED LOOK EH ?

Troubles never come singly—at least they don't seem like "troubles" until you've been married to them for a while.

* * *

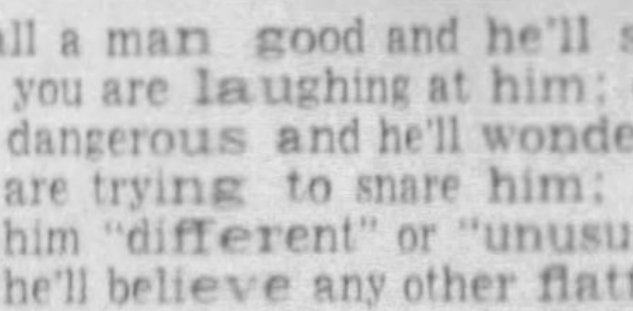
"The course of true love" runs so "smooth" for the average man, these days, that he gets bored and switches off onto another course, before he gets half started.

* * *

A man seldom goes into marriage with his eyes open. He waits until he has been blinded by some blow of fate or dazzled by some turn of fortune, and then just totters or staggers into the arms of the woman who happens to be nearest.

* * *

A pessimist is not always one who has to live with an optimist; it is sometimes a woman who is married to an unquenchable amateur-humorist.



YOU'RE SO DIFFERENT !

Call a man good and he'll suspect you are laughing at him; call him dangerous and he'll wonder if you are trying to snare him; but call him "different" or "unusual," and he'll believe any other flattering fiction you choose to tell him.

* * *

Every man must have been born with the soul of a juggler to judge from his burning passion for trying to keep two love affairs perfectly balanced at the same time.

* * *

Just about now the bright summer romance, which lit up all the scenery for a girl, is beginning to look as faded and washed-out as her bathing suit.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—For two or three months now I've been trying to get around to a good old-fashioned cry. But something always came up. Just when I'd get into the first sniffle, somebody would drop in or the phone would ring, and I'd have to unpucker my face and be all merry and bright.

Old Sunshine through the tears! I've nothing particular to sob over, but everybody is giving crying a twirl. I don't want the public one up on me. In my day, man and boy, I was no mean cryer—nothing fancy, no handwringing or moaning. Just a plain kitchen-step boo-hooer.

The way they cry on the stage and in the movies is simply disgusting. You'd think they were crooning. A tear trickles down the cheek, a soft moan and that's all. There isn't a full blown choke in the entire three reels. Come up on top of the building, I'll show you something.

Here I am. I'll give them rain on the roof, and no fooling. Let me see—what shall I start my cry with? Now, I've ended a sentence with a preposition. That's enough for a starter. I'm one of those rare old precisionists who can always beller over a mistake in grammar.

I don't seem as good as I thought. I'm just squeezing out a sick tear. What to do! What to do! O, yes, there's that Peru bond in default. Now I'm getting a little action. Get a load of that right duct! What I could have done with that coin! Several suits and a carpet sweeper for my wife.

* * *

What little sympathy I get from her when Peru went sour. All the time she told me I should have put it in a government bond. All the time—sniff, sniff—she did. Pretty tough to work like a dog to buy it. And now look. Security, they called it. Security! I must watch myself, and not go in for any handwringing. I promised only straight crying.

* * *

The hours I sat humped over a typewriter, pinching pennies, denying myself this pleasure and that, and for what? I don't believe I can go on. See my shoulders shake. With what wide-eyed innocence I asked them to pick me out a high-grade, giltedged bond. Something for the rainy day. And speaking of rainy days, this is no cheap little fourth-rate shower I'm putting on. But I haven't my bond. I haven't anything. I'm practically all alone in the world. Nobody loves me. My side hurts. Nobody ever did love me. Now I'm getting somewhere. Wait a minute while I open my shirt front. It's getting spotty.

* * *

I'll be a sight at that dinner party tonight. My eyes are all puffed, and looking like two burnt holes in a blanket. I should care. They don't want me at dinners anymore, anyway. They ask me because they know about my Peru bond. Just an object of pity. That's all. I know about their pointing. I can hear them say: "Don't look now, but there he is. Once he had almost everything and now he's around cadging meals." If you don't think I'm letting go, you should see this roof. I'm liable to cavort off in a whirlpool any minute. Shooting the rapids, as it were.

* * *

If I cry around the house I get the dickens for dripping up the carpet. Can't even cry in my own home, that's what. That sounds like someone. Probably a bucket brigade with mops. Nay, sires, don't mind me. I'm here all alone, having my cry. Pull up a bench. Have you your own handkerchiefs? It isn't anybody at all and I'm getting my mind off my sobbing. Also my throat is beginning to ache.

* * *

The sun is going down. Where will we all be 50 years from now? That's starting me off again. Covered with white syringas, I suppose, in some forgotten potter field. All I want is a simple stone. Nobody will ever miss me. I bet they haven't missed me downstairs. I'm about cried out, at that. O, I have a good one. All the movie military ushers have been de-uniformed. Think of them—sniff, sniff—running around without their pretty epaulets.

* * *

And the poor vanishing Indian. Took this great big island from them for 23 berries. But maybe they got a break, at that. Well, that about winds up my cry. I'm out of material. Maybe I could edge out a slim tear for the Wall street crowd that rigged the market for innocents and got scorched themselves. Now I have myself laughing.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

He's been telling me what a poor worm he is—

How he's just naturally weak—and—wobbly—

And how he envies people who are born with strong characters.

The whole thing sounds familiar. I've heard that alibi thousands of times. Even used it myself, until I didn't have the heart to kid myself any longer. For, of course, that's all it is—just kidding—feeble flim-flam for floppy folks. Not a word of truth in it.

NOBODY IS BORN WITH A STRONG CHARACTER.

Characters aren't born; they're made.

We all start weak and wobbly. We start with fear in our hearts and ignorance in our brains, and because of that fear and ignorance, we're all little savages at the start; little, stupid, greedy, dishonest, cowardly savages. And then, starting at scratch, we must begin to acquire our civilized characters.

That process is always difficult. It's never easy for anyone. No one is naturally good or brave or honest. Each one of us must learn to be these things bit by bit.

Literally, bit by bit.

There's no such thing as acquiring character in blocks. You can't learn how to be brave, honest, kind or sensible in a week, or a year, or a score of years. You can't achieve these things by one act, or hundreds of acts. You've got to pile act upon act—little acts that seem insignificant and unessential.

BUT NO ACT OF YOUR LIFE IS INSIGNIFICANT OR UNESSENTIAL.

EVERY ACT OF YOUR LIFE, EVERY DECISION YOU MAKE, HAS A MEANING AND HAS AN EFFECT ON YOUR CHARACTER.

EVERY ACT, EVERY DECISION, HELPS TO BUILD UP YOUR CHARACTER, OR BREAK IT DOWN.

Your character is the result of ALL your acts; of ALL your decisions.

But most of us don't realize that. We think the little things we do don't matter. We aren't interested in doing the little things. We don't care much how we do them. It's the Big Ambition that matters.

Each one of us has some Big Ambition—some cherished dream of achievement. And it's always a fine dream, without a flaw in it. There never yet was a man who wanted to become a villain, nor a woman who wanted to become a fool. We all want to be great examples some day, and we're all sure that we will be what we desire.

Yes, some day it will all come true. And in the meantime? Well, in the meantime we muddle along, doing tiresome things, and, because they seem so unimportant, doing them sloppily. Making little decisions, and, because they seem so trivial, making them carelessly.

And so sloppiness and carelessness grow on us, as habits, and presently our morals are as fumbling as our hands—and our thoughts are as fuzzy as the domes that cover them.

But all the time we're dreaming of the things we want to be, envying the people who are already like that, and thinking that, because our dream is splendid, it must surely come true.

BUT IT DOESN'T!

WE NEVER BECOME WHAT WE WANT TO BE.

WE ONLY BECOME WHAT WE CHOOSE TO BE.

AND WITH EVERY CARELESS ACT, WITH EVERY FOOLISH DECISION, WE MAKE THAT CHOICE.

Don't wish you were strong.
Don't envry strong people.
BE STRONG!
START AS THEY STARTED!
START NOW!

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

Mr. Coolidge Defends Himself

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The article by Calvin Coolidge, inviting a suffering nation that has about gone bankrupt under the ministrations of Mr. Hoover to ''four years more of Hoover,'' smacks of a professional politician having much difficulty with his material. It is common knowledge, of course, that the politician of Northampton would be for any Republican under any circumstances.

There are reasons why Mr. Coolidge must feel some personal responsibility for the disasters that have befallen millions during the Hoover regime. History will record that the panic, the crash, the crumbling of trade and industry, the collapse of credit were made inevitable by the do-nothing policy of the Coolidge era when the forces that wrought the ruin were given a free hand to do whatever they wished.

Mr. Coolidge himself personally set the example of using the Presidential office to affect the battling of the bulls and bears. He is more responsible than Hoover for the panic; and this would be a plea in extenuation for the latter but for the fact that he was part of the Coolidge regime and in hearty sympathy with its policies, and continued the market-minded program until the crash came.

* * *

Garner Appeal Brought Action

It is unfortunate, however, that the material of defence is so meagre as to force a former President to the misrepresentation of the facts. When Mr. Coolidge solemnly says that there would have been no increase in taxation for the balancing of the budget but for the insistence of Mr. Hoover he puts the facts aside. There was a Congressional fight as to the best method of balancing the budget, and the two parties were divided; and the most courageous and inspiring act in assuring the raising of enough revenue to balance the budget was the dramatic appeal of Jack Garner, as everyone knows.

But it is not true, as Mr. Coolidge says, that the budget actually has been balanced. We are running far below the estimated revenues—which is running true to form, for Mellon and Mills are always off on their estimates by a few hundred millions. Mr. Coolidge knows that the bare balancing of the budget, as estimated, contemplated the payments on the foreign debts which he also knows Mr. Hoover has no expectation of receiving.

* * *

Coolidge Approves Tariff Wall

Mr. Coolidge heartily approves Mr. Hoover's Chinese wall against foreign trade which has ruined our foreign markets—and that was to be expected. Had the people had proper leadership, and anything other than market-minded leadership in government during the Coolidge regime there would have been no tragic collapse. Now that Mr. Coolidge has informed us that the leadership of Mr. Hoover has been superb we have finally disposed of the much mooted question as to whether the politician of Northampton has a sense of humor. He has, and it is rare—perhaps a bit too broad.

* * *

But Unemployment Still Increases

Meanwhile, with the politicians, like Mr. Coolidge whose do-nothing policy permitted us to drift to ruin, and with the propagandists under the inspiration of the Wall street crowd smugly assuring us that we are returning to prosperity, we find that unemployment is increasing.

It is now estimated by those whose business it is to know, outside political circles, that instead of ten million breadwinners on the streets there are eleven millions. This, of course, does not include the dependents of the jobless.

These, Mr. Coolidge no more than Mr. Hoover condescends to notice. They are not stocks or bonds or dividends or cash—they are merely the men, women and children of toil—the "forgotten" people, of flesh and blood.

There is too much ballyhoo for campaign purposes about returning prosperity because of manipulations of the market that mean nothing when the line of the jobless lengthens and welfare organizations are begging us all for funds to save the lives of hungry children.

* * *

Federal Relief Work Withheld

Under these circumstances the Hoover Administration withholds money and jobs provided by Congressional enactment with the very reluctant consent of Mr. Hoover.

Congress voted $300,000,000 for the relief of the hungry—and with welfare organizations begging, this money has been withheld by the Administration.

Congress provided $2,000,000,000 for relief and construction seven weeks ago—and not a penny has been used.

When money was voted for construction work it was made to cover only such building projects as the executive heads of the Administration said could be begun at once; and after seven weeks nothing has been done!

And now Ogden Mills, that ardent lover of the masses, says complacently that along about the first of October he will see what can be done.

And Senator Wagner answers:

> "With 11,000,000 out of work, with millions of families relying on relief, it seems to me that we shall experience a winter of indescribable cruelty unless we immediately bring into full operation the $2,000,000,000 relief and construction act."

"Cruelty" is too mild a word; we would substitute "brutality."

* * *

Must Restore Nation's Trade

And along with the brutality is not a little plain asininity.

For it is absurd to dream of the restoration of prosperity for anyone so long as 11,000,000 breadwinners, involving forty million people, are out of the purchasing class; and as long as thirty million on the farms have no money with which to buy.

There is but one way to restore prosperity and that is to restore trade.

There is but one way to restore domestic trade, and that is to find employment for a good portion of the jobless, thereby giving them wages with which to buy.

There is only one way to restore foreign trade, and that is by removing the barriers against trade thrown up by the Grundys of the country at the water's edge.

And the administration is against both methods, and Mr. Coolidge thinks that is intelligent leadership!

* * *

'Higher-Ups' Alone Get Real Attention

Mr. Coolidge, like Mr. Hoover, thinks that the way to restore prosperity is to take care of the powerful at the top. That the Hoover administration has been doing handsomely; but that has not prevented the increasing of the line of the jobless.

And when the line of the jobless lengthens by a million, the merchant has a million fewer customers; and that decreases the merchants' demand upon the factory; and that puts more men upon the street.

Prosperity must be built from the ground up. It can never be done by the manipulation of the market. It never will be done by the unintelligent market-minded leadership in control of the government today.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Laughter

Cares may crush and loss may grieve us,
Joys may with each day grow less,
Still, life cannot quite bereave us
While this blessing we possess.

Fearless of what may come after
As down unknown ways we grope,
While we have the gift of laughter
We are not devoid of hope.

Laughter's echoes, gaily ringing,
Banish futile doubt and gloom,
Set a thousand hopes to singing,
Bring a thousand dreams to bloom.

Laughter gives us golden dowers
Rare as jade and chrysoprase,
Laughter's notes are budding flowers

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?
